MANY HURT IN TRAIN COLLISION

More than 100 people were thrown from their seats and several men and women severely injured when a four-car heavy suburban electric train on the New Haven Railroad jumped a switch just inside of Pemberton, on its way from Nantasket, to-day and crashed into cars on a siding. The motorman saved his own life by leaping from the car just before the crash came.

The train was on its way to meet the 9:05 boat at Pemberton. It had attained a speed of about twenty miles an hour when it took a siding which was half filled with empty cars.

Passengers Tossed About.

James F. Barry, president of the Meeting House Hill Improvement Association, was thrown from the car and severely hurt. He proceeded to Boston on the boat from Pemberton in care of friends. He was seated in the first car when the crash came and was thrown from his seat. He is passing the Summer at his Summer home at Point Allerton.

A newsboy was on the running board when the cars came together. He was thrown, and after turning a double somersault got to his feet, apparently unhurt.

Passengers were unable to leave the cars. The crash threw one woman and several men from their seats. One man was so badly hurt that he had to be carried to his home by friends. A number of women were hysterical. Men and women on all four cars were bruised and cut by being thrown about the cars.

There were over 100 passengers on the four cars. Most of them were women who were so frightened and unnerved by the accident that they went to their homes. Several had to be attended by physicians.

There was a wild scene just after the cars came together. Men and women scrambled for places of safety. The crash of the cars could be heard for a long distance and hundreds of people rushed to the scene.

Cars Are Battered.

The cause of the accident is being investigated. Some of the passengers say that the switch was open and that the motorman did not see it until too late to check the speed of his train. The first car of the train and a car on the siding were badly wrecked in the crash. All of the cars were more or less damaged.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Aug. 5.—Before another record-breaking crowd, approaching 28,000 people, the Red Sox sought to make it five straight from the Tigers this afternoon in the final game of the series.

There was no chance for Detroit to regain its lead, but Jennings's men realized how seriously another beating would affect their chances for the pennant and were crazy to turn the tables and snatch one victory before departing for New York.

The fans began flocking to the park long before play time. The reserved seats in grandstand and boxes were sold out before noon, and the holders of these seats were the only ones who felt entirely comfortable.

The rest knew that they would have to struggle hard for points of vantage and the late arrivals realized that they would have to be content with standing room.

Perfect Day For Game.

The day was perfect, but nothing short of a cyclone could have kept the faithful away on this occasion.

The Tigers arrived on the field earlier than usual. Manager Jennings decided this morning that they needed a lot of batting practice and wanted them to be on hand to take full advantage of the time allotted them.

Some of the ad men stayed over expressly to take in this big battle, and they drew a lot of attention to themselves with their noisy rooting, which seemed to be impartial.

Ropes were stretched in front of the stands and bleachers, and ground rules, giving batters two bases on drives into the crowd and allowing runners one base on overthrows, were necessary.

Wood to Face Tigers.

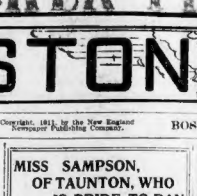
Manager Jennings had Lively, Summers and Covington warming up. Summers was his favorite, for the knuckle ball pitcher held Boston to four hits in the recent series in Detroit. Joe Wood was picked to work for the Sox, with Bill Carrigan behind the bat.

MISS SAMPSON, OF TAUNTON, WHO IS BRIDE TO-DAY



MRS. DR. HAROLD BOWDITCH.

A wedding which had as a prelude a romance in which Boston and Cambridge society was much interested, took place at No. 15 Harrison street, Taunton, this afternoon, when Miss Clara Sampson became the bride of Dr. Harold Bowditch, a Back Bay physician.

The wedding was at the residence of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Ira Sampson, and was an unostentatious home event. The bridegroom is the son of Professor H. P. Bowditch of Harvard.

The bride is an orphan, and has made her home since her parents died with her grandmother. She is a graduate of Wellesley, and, after leaving college, taught in a fashionable school for girls in the Back Bay. It was while earning her livelihood in this capacity that Miss Sampson met the distinguished young physician, who became her husband to-day.

Miss Sampson is a charming example of the cultured, intellectual type of New England girl, and her family is among the best in the state. The physician and the girl instructor soon fell in love, and all their friends think they are perfectly mated.

Dr. Bowditch graduated from Harvard in 1905, and his family home is sunnyside, Jamaica Plain. His mother, Mrs. H. P. Bowditch, is one of the leaders of Boston's society set, and his sisters are Miss Fanny Bowditch, Mrs. James Savage of South Framingham, Mrs. Eliot N. Jones of Acorn street and Mrs. Frederick van Loon of The Hague.

ROOSEVELT A WITNESS ON STEEL

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States, appeared unexpectedly before the Stanley committee investigating the Steel Trust to-day and assumed entire responsibility for allowing the United States Steel Corporation to acquire the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company during the panic of 1907. He said he wanted to avert a "world-wide smash," and succeeded in his purpose.

Mr. Roosevelt read a statement he had prepared for the committee, in which he said:

"It was necessary for me to decide the instant, before the opening of the Stock Exchange, and failure to act at that time would have made any future action useless. Attorney-General Bonaparte advised me that in the circumstances there would be no proper ground for prosecuting the Steel Corporation. But I wish it to be distinctly understood that the responsibility for the act is solely mine."

The ex-President, however, admitted that he had not been told by Messrs. Gary and Frick at their conference with him that the contemplated deal was necessary for the United States Steel Corporation to absorb the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company in order to stop the panic.

Appearance Was Voluntary.

The sudden appearance of the ex-President, by whose sanction the Steel Trust is said to have been allowed to absorb the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company, its sole rival, caused a sensation.

It was entirely voluntary, though the committee has long wanted to know about the conference between Judge Gary, Henry C. Frick and himself during the panic of 1907, when big financial concerns were tottering. Wall street and others feared and Gary wanted assurance that the Steel Trust would get to prosecuted if it got tied up in deal.

While this conference was on the syndicate members holding the stock of Tennessee Coal Iron were visiting at the home of J. P. Morgan. When word came over the telephone from Washington that everything was all right, the rival company was promptly absorbed.

Schwab Yields Witness Stand.

Colonel Roosevelt, dressed in a sack suit of tinted material and wearing the old Roosevelt smile, showing his big white teeth, addressed himself with gusto to Merlin W. Littleton of the committee, when he appeared. His greetings were effusive, as they always are, and he shook hands with Chairman Stanley and a number of newspaper men he has long known.

Colonel Roosevelt, in volunteering himself as a witness, said that he desired to give what information he possessed in the matter of the Steel Trust.

It was expected that Charles M. Schwab would resume the stand to-day, but Schwab made way for the distinguished witness, and he immediately began testifying as to the business depression of 1907.

Action Unprecedented.

This was the first time in the history of the nation that any President had appeared before an investigating body to defend his acts of his administration after leaving office, but the colonel showed no signs of nervousness when he took the stand.

He sat down in the witness chair, adjusted his nose glasses, took a bundle of writing paper from his pockets, nodded to Chairman Stanley and spread the papers out in front of him on the table.

Chairman Stanley asked the colonel to tell the history in his own way, of what happened at the conference leading up to the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company by the Steel Corporation.

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen," said Colonel Roosevelt, in a well modulated tone, "I am agreeable to you, I will read from these notes the matter with which I am not entirely familiar just now and with which I have refreshed my memory."

"Great Impending Danger."

"In the Fall of 1907," then read Colonel Roosevelt, "there was a serious financial depression in New York City and elsewhere. The damage that had been done was great. The impending danger was greater, there was a panic and no one could tell or foresee what might occur.

"This impending calamity was stopped. Mr. Bonaparte got in touch with the pos-

Col. W. C. Greene, Dead in Mexico

COLONEL GREENE IS DEAD

CANEA Mex., Aug. 5.—Colonel W. C. Greene millionaire American mine owner and rancher, died here at 3 a. m. of acute pneumonia. Physicians and nurses had arrived from El Paso and Naco, Ariz., a few hours before death, but their services were without avail. Colonel Greene's family were at his bedside.

Colonel Greene—Colonel "Bill" Greene, as friends called him—is best known in Boston for the part he played in the famous Lawson-Greene episode seven years ago. Colonel Greene, who was president of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company, had been hit to the extent of $7,000,000 by the slump in the stock market which followed Thomas W. Lawson's attack on Amalgamated Copper.

Famous Row with Lawson.

Colonel Greene, who was known far and wide as a "character," in printed advertisements called Lawson a "faker, liar and charlatan." Immediately thereafter the Colonel hopped on the first train over from New York. He said he intended to make Lawson take back statements he had made about Greene.

"Lawson has said I was a liar," said the colonel. "I shall endeavor to make him retract this statement."

Lawson, the people of the street financier and author of "Frenzied Finance" was that he was "ready" for Colonel Greene any time he came. He said he was prepared for either "pistols or peace." He said he was ready for the "whole Standard Oil."

The more bullish the Colonel became, the more bearish Lawson appeared. It looked like a big row and everybody figured he got off the train in the South Station.

Lawson Picked Up the Gauntlet.

The word got about that Lawson had flung down the gauntlet to the Westerner by saying he would meet him in front of the old State House the scene of the Boston Massacre, and where Crispus Attucks fell. The crowd looked for a "shoot." They knew that the Colonel was coming with a gun on which he "had notched his men."

"I came to Boston with the one thing in view, to meet Lawson face to face," said the Colonel to the reporters. Then the Colonel rolled up his sleeves and everybody thought he was preparing for the battle.

But the Colonel did not show up in front of the old State House. Lawson was there, but his enemy didn't put in his appearance.

"I was not when I said it," Colonel Greene later explained his absence to the reporters, "and now I'm too old to gun around with a gun. I don't want any fight. I am not going to kill Tom Lawson. That's not the object of my visit."

Finally the two mining magnates met. It was the day after the promised encounter in front of the old State House. It came about in the lobby of the Hotel Touraine.

"Good mornin' Bill, good mornin' and welcome to Boston, said Lawson.

They Buried the Hatchet.

Howdy do, Tom, howdy do, I'm right glad to see you," said the Colonel.

Then there was handshaking, smiles, while a host of reporters, detectives, personal friends and Richmond Jim" Brady of New York looked on and admired.

The "shoot" turned out to be a polite meeting between the Statue of Finance and the Alphonse of Copper. It ended with a complete burial of the hatchet in six feet of earth. Colonel Greene went back to New York and then to Old Mexico.

He was born in New York in 1851. He first became prominent as a rancher and cattleman when he purchased the Cananea mines and founded the Greene Consolidated Copper Company, which now operates the largest copper smelting plant in the world. He was president of several mining companies, and was also interested in, and connected with several western railroads.

LINEMAN KILLED BY CROSSING OF WIRES

John L. Murray, employed as a lineman by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, was killed on Eastern avenue, near Oakwood avenue, Lynn, when a wire which he was assisting in stringing slipt accidentally became crossed with a live wire, sending an electric current of 1,000 volts through his body. The shock threw him to the ground. Murray was thirty-two years old, unmarried, and lived at the Elmwood House, Central avenue, Lynn.

MAN KILLED IN AUTO OVERTURN

WESTFIELD, Aug. 5.—John D. Cronin, proprietor of the Cabot House, Chicopee, is dead as the result of the driver of a speeding automobile attempting to turn the machine from Montgomery street into Crown street. The automobile turned a complete somersault, coming right side up, and practically unhurt, after straying its four occupants into a ditch across the roadway. Miss Maud Jones, twenty-five years old, of Chicopee, has a fractured skull and internal injuries. The other occupants of the automobile, John S. Sorrell, proprietor of the Liberty Auto Company, Springfield, and Alfred Covins of the same city, were able to go to their homes.

CONSTANCE WARREN NOW A MILE RUNNER

NEWPORT, Aug. 5.—Miss Constance Warren, the athletic society girl, has added sprinting to her other accomplishments, and she can run a mile swiftly and easily. A few days ago Miss Warren took a twenty-eight mile horseback ride and then, feeling in need of a swim, she plunged into the ocean and swam from Bailey's to Easton's Beach, a distance of a mile and a half, making the second time of 33 minutes.

Recently after taking a swim the charming young woman thought that she needed exercise of another kind. She called Miss Chanfrau, who generally accompanies her on her outings, and remarked quite casually:

"Mike, I want you to measure off a mile course on Ocean Drive."

"What's up—horse race?" asked Michael.

"No, I am going to become a runner. Think I can run a mile?"

"Sure, Miss," replied Mike.

Then Mr. Chanfrau proceeded to measure a mile off on the Ocean Drive and Miss Warren started practice.

He was taken ill last Monday. Mr. Hart was born in Blackburn, England, in 1857 and had lived here twenty-eight years.

GIRL FOUND IN TREE RECOVERING HEALTH

BETHEL, Me., Aug. 5.—Now that Miss Elsie Davis, organist of the Methodist Church, has been restored to the home from which she disappeared Sunday, work has been resumed in the town. The mills, which closed Monday morning, have been re-opened and Bethel has lapsed into commonplace existence. The girl is much better to-day and will recover, but she says simply that she was lost in the woods and continued to wander about until she was found perched high in a tree.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PARK, St. Louis, Aug. 5.—Hostilities were renewed to-day between Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals and Fred Tenney's Rustlers. The recent slump of the Cards caused a falling off in the attendance, still there was a good-sized crowd out, for the National Leaguers are very popular here.

Tenney's team looks like a real one now, with Mike Donlin and young Jacobs added to the outfield, and local fans were looking for a hard battle.

It was probable that Tenney would use Hank Weaver, who was doing the pitching effectively when rain stopped Thursday's affair. Harry Ballee was in line for the Cards.

GYPSIES ARE BLAMED FOR STEALING HORSE

NEWBURYPORT, Aug. 5.—When George Biddle, a Boston business man, with a Summer home here, ordered his coachman to harness up his horse and wagon to drive him to the station to-day, it was discovered that horse, buggy and harness were missing. It is supposed they were taken into during the night. It is thought that a band of gypsies who were seen late last night on their way to Newbury were responsible.

CLEAR CROCKER OF AUTO DEATH

George U. Crocker, a well known lawyer and formerly city treasurer, was freed from blame in connection with the death of William Farrell, last March, in the report filed this afternoon by Judge Went worth, who held the inquest and investigated the automobile accident in which Farrell lost his life. Farrell was hit by Mr. Crocker's automobile and died later at the City Hospital. Judge Wentworth found that Farrell was grossly negligent.

"Whether or not Mr Crocker was negligent may be an open question, yet the boy was undoubtedly grossly negligent," said the judge. "It does seem that any person when driving an automobile at a high rate of speed, when any part of the street he can see is occupied by children, should be so controlled that he will be able to stop as soon as he is able to instantly come to complete stop."

Judge Wentworth did not find that the unlawful act of any person contributed to the death. The report says Mr. Crocker was driving along Bine Hill avenue and passed a grocer's delivery team. Farrell had run in front of the team. When seen by Mr. Crocker he was immediately in front of the machine.

FAST PLAY TO-DAY AT NEWPORT CASINO

Charles E. Sand and Mrs. Miln Gordon Douglas were victors over Mr. R. Burgess and Mrs. Esther Barger in sets of 6—4 and 6—4. The finals in the tournament will be played here Monday, between the winners of to-day's match and Mr. Cyril Biddle and Mrs. W. G. Lowe. The summary:

SOCIAL WAR IN ASTOR ROMANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—It is understood by the Four Hundred that Miss Madeline Talmage Force, the fiancee of Colonel John Jacob Astor, will be the richest dowered bride to marry a member of society that this country has ever known. If she is adorned with all the jewels which Colonel Astor is reputed to be buying for his bride, she will be fairly iridescent with gems and sparkle like a Rajah's daughter.

This is the most interesting topic among Summer residents of Newport. There are very few members of the Four Hundred in New York at present, but the jewelers are all here and all overhauling their stocks to see if they have anything which will be especially tempting to the richest landlord in this city.

One of the gifts he has selected for the bride-elect is a diamond of purest ray service, which weighs fourteen karats and is valued at $12,000. It is the beginning of a collection which will be of greater value than that possessed by any woman of conspicuous fame in society.

Although her family is wealthy and of good social standing, it has never figured among the elect which the late Ward McAllister declared to be the only persons deserving to be numbered in the four hundred social circle of New York. Miss Force in fact will really be introduced to the Four Hundred at the dinner which Colonel Astor will give in her honor at Newport on Friday evening.

The Force family has engaged a Summer cottage in Newport for the remainder of the Summer and may be installed in it by next week. Mounds of Preparations for their going there are being rushed and ple in New York. As you know, the events moved swiftly. He took some action on his own initiative and I did also.

"I was notified that a couple of gentlemen were waiting to see me in my office in the White House. Mr. Bousparte had gone out of town, but I immediately got in touch with one of his assistants, Messrs. Frick and Gary were in my office waiting for me.

"I wish it distinctly understood that in the matter of the acquisition of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company by the United States Steel Corporation I acted purely upon my own initiative. The responsibility is solely mine.

"The word panic means fear—unreasoning fear. You all know that in times like that time, and unless something is done at once to stop it, it is possible that there would have been a general world-wide smash.

"The Knickerbocker Trust Company had failed, and two or three other trust companies followed. Other big ones were on the trembling line. They, or rather the individuals in them, held securities of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company.

"Now these securities were useless in case of an emergency, but the value of the securities of the United States Steel Corporation was known all over the world.

"An Hour Might Be Vital."

"Mr. Frick and Mr. Gary proposed to me that, to save the situation, the United States Steel Corporation would acquire the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company. Now it was necessary for me to decide that proposition on the instant, in the midst of the stock exchange fever. The situation in New York was such that an hour might be vital, and that failure to act for even one hour might subsequently render all efforts at action useless.

"By having the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, the United States Steel Corporation would simply have added about 4½ per cent. to its control of the steel and iron product—an increase from 58 per cent. to 62½ per cent. This addition by itself would have worked no change in the legal status of the Steel Corporation. Action was emphatically necessary for the general good of the public. The only chance of arresting a panic was offered by Messrs. Frick and Gary. I answered Mr. Frick and Judge Gary to the effect that I did not deem it my duty to interfere—that is, to forbid action which might have and did save the situation.

"Results justified my action. The panic was stopped; public confidence was restored.

"Stand Taken Was Necessary."

"When I was in Birmingham, Ala., last Spring, citizens there informed me voluntarily that the action taken by the Steel Corporation in acquiring the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company had proved of great benefit to them and therefore to the whole State of Alabama. Wage-earners reaped the benefit in the change in owners and business generally increased.

QUICK TRIAL FOR BEATTIE

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 5.—Preparations are being concluded here for the trial on August 14 of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., for the murder of his wife.

The young man, who has recklessly sought pleasure all his mature days, will find himself facing a jury of stern, hard headed, plain farmer folk of Chesterfield county, which lies just across the James River from this city.

The drama of this trial will be played in a quaint old courthouse built a century ago, shaded by great trees, and on the quiet main road that runs through the village of Chesterfield, five miles away from the railroad and the telegraph.

Into this old courthouse will be brought the one time debonair young man who was known in Manchester, Richmond and Norfolk as "a devil of a fellow," and with him will be brought another who has gone the same pace—Beulah Binford, who is believed to have been the cause of Beattie dishonoring his family's good name by vicious dissipation which weakened his character so that he dipped his hands in the blood of his wife, a young and good woman.

There will be little in the way of accommodation for the crowds that will flock to the village for the trial. The murder was so brutal that the man accused of it will be given extra guards for fear the evidence of the trial will work on the public mind and lead to trouble. Tents will be pitched about the old courthouse and a command of State militia will be kept on duty as a precaution.

Swift Justice Threatens.

Justice moves swiftly in Virginia, and Virginia jurors do not pay much heed to new-fangled forms of insanity as defence pleas. There will be no delays at the trial, for the blood of Henry Beattie's wife cries loudly for vengeance, and the people of Virginia are anxious to have done with the dreadful thing.

Two able men, two of the ablest at the bar of Virginia, have been engaged to save Beattie from death at the hands of the law. They are Hill Carter, a bulky man with a big brain, skilled in the lawyer's suave and gentle in his approach to a witness, but quick and keen for taking advantage of every point in favor of a client; and Harry M. Smith, once Commonwealth's Attorney of Richmond, who spent all of his professional career in handling criminal cases.

On the other hand the Commonwealth's attorney of Chesterfield will have as an aide Louis Wendenburg, than whom there is no clever cross-examiner in the South. Moreover, in the matter of gathering facts for an appeal to the jurors, collating them carefully and putting them forth in vigorous oratory, he has not an equal.

Mr. Wendenburg has had the entire detective force of Richmond at his disposal. He is ready now to try the case, and he believes he will prove the complicity of the State that Mrs. Beattie died at the hands of her husband.

The defence has not yet given an inkling of how it will conduct its case, or what line of evidence it will introduce to dispute the known facts or to offer excuse for them. But the prosecution is ready and here is its line of action:

What Prosecution Charges.

The prosecution will endeavor to prove the following against Henry Clay Beattie:

That was anxious to resume his old life with Beulah Binford, his so-called "soul mate," mother of his first born, and who returned to Richmond a short time before the Chesterfield tragedy.

He had been seen with her often since her return to the city and wrote letters to her frequently.

He had quarrelled violently with his wife during the latter part of June and early July.

His wife, the mother of his five-weeks-old baby, Henry Clay Beattie, 3d., had learned of his attentions to the Binford girl.

He got his cousin to purchase an ancient single-barrel shotgun and three shells for him four days before Mrs. Beattie was killed. The gun his cousin, Paul Beattie, purchased for him was identified by the storekeeper as the one with which the wife and mother was killed.

One of the shells purchased by Paul and said to have been identified by him, was found in the woods near the scene of the tragedy.

Henry Beattie ordered his wife to see that no one was in the automobile with him and her on the night the tragedy was enacted.

He was two hours late keeping his appointment with his wife. He spent these two hours, the prosecution will charge, making preparation to slay his wife.

Beattie was seen at the scene of the tragedy more than two hours before it was suspected. He was then, it is declared, preparing for the murder.

Beattie stopped his automobile, in which he and his wife were seated, opposite the stump where he had hidden the loaded gun and got his wife out of the automobile under the pretext that the machine had broken down.

Two automobiles, filled with youthful merrymakers returning from a dance at Ben Alt, passed Beattie's machine. Seeing him bending over the automobile they stopped and offered him assistance. He refused their overtures. Before they reached Richmond Mrs. Beattie had been slain.

After the two automobiles passed Beattie asked his wife to watch the machine while he went to the roadside to get a stone to use as a hammer; he got the gun from behind the stump, and at the end of the barrel, and, it will be charged, felled his wife with the stock, placed the muzzle of the gun to her right cheek and fired while she lay prostrate in the road.

While his wife's life ebbed away in the road, Beattie sounded the horn of his automobile so as to attract attention. No one answered this call for help. Beattie placed the waterproof automobile curtain on the front seat and side of the automobile and dragged his wife's body over it to a position by his side. The stained curtain was found in the tool box of his automobile. Starting the automobile, he proceeded swiftly to the Belt Line Railroad tracks. He stopped, it is charged, and threw out the gun, hoping it would drop where a passing train would crush it beyond recognition.

The bones of the front part of Mrs. Beattie's head were crushed in, the injury unquestionably rendering the woman unconscious, and the blow being dealt with a heavy blunt instrument.

Actions After the Tragedy.

Upon arriving at the home of Thomas Owen, Beattie was the coolest, calmest, most composed and unconcerned person in the household. He calmly assisted in getting the automobile started back on the scene of the tragedy. He urged the members of the coroner's jury to find the gun, believing that Paul Beattie's purchase of the gun would not be discovered.

At the funeral he was the calmest and most unaffected individual present.

After the funeral he paced the porch of his home smoking cigarettes and showing signs that he believed himself a haunted man.

On midnight of the day of the funeral he communicated with his cousin by telephone, inquired of the latter if he had been summoned to the inquest, and advised him, if he should be, to "keep his mouth shut."

At the inquest Paul Beattie confessed that he had purchased the gun and shells and shouted in his hysteria, "I don't want any more money."

Beulah Binford at the inquest told of having received visits and letters from Beattie a few days before the tragedy.

Beulah Binford said Beattie was giving her money toward setting up a home.

Mrs. Beattie's mother had a premonition that harm would overtake her daughter if she went automobiling alone with Beattie, and vigorously objected to such an arrangement the night of the murder.

Mission Ship and Its Fair "Crew"

The luxuriously fitted three-masted schooner George B. Cluett, presented to the Grenfell Association by George B. Cluett of Troy, N. Y., to-day took on board stores and provisions of all kinds for her 2,000 mile cruise along the rock-coast of Labrador to the missions established in the near-Arctic regions by Dr. Wilbur T. Grenfell.

The schooner is built along beautiful lines, outfitted complete and ready for work to the association. She is equipped with auxiliary power that renders her independent of weather conditions. She will leave to-night or to-morrow for Labrador, and it is felt that her services will be a big help in the work of the missions.

Six Months' Labrador Cruise.

The boat, just completed in New York, received a part of her cargo there and came on to Boston, arriving yesterday. She is under charter of W. H. Stirling of Chicago, a director of the association, and he with his two daughters and several friends will go in her to Labrador for a six months' cruise. His daughters, Miss Dorothy Stirling and Miss Jean Stirling, Miss Frances Smith of Hoboken, N. J., and Miss Harriet Houghtaling, with Mr. Stirling and Mr. William Dickinson of Chicago, form the party.

The two auxiliary engines use either gasoline or kerosene for fuel, and are capable of driving the boat at a speed of nine knots. She carries a deck load of oil and fuel, and in her holds are stored provisions and hospital supplies, which will be distributed at the missions.

Dr. Grenfell in England.

Mr. Stirling said of the trip to-day: "We expect to get away to-night or to-morrow and make straight for Labrador. Yarmouth will probably be the first stop. Dr. Grenfell was called to England a short time ago, and may not be there when we arrive, but we will surely see him before our return. We expect after dropping our supplies to visit the different missions and then return either to Boston or to St. John, N. B. The boat will make another trip with supplies this September.

"Although I am connected with the association I do not go as a representative of them, but simply as a friend of Dr. Grenfell and an admirer of the wonderful work he has done there. We expect to have the best sort of a Summer vacation out of the cruise, and at the same time see things that have been known to us only from the accounts that have come home from the missions."

Mr. Stirling and his daughters are in mourning for the recent death of Mrs. Stirling.

FINE HOTEL MEN IN LIQUOR CASE

In the Lynn Police Court to-day Charles W. Carter and Edward W. Grafton, proprietors of the Hotel Preston at Beach Bluffs, one of the most fashionable of the North Shore hotels, were fined $50 each by Judge O'Brien for illegal liquor selling. John McAnena, counsel for the defendants, asked whether a plea of nolo would be accepted and upon being told that it would not, entered a plea of guilty for his two clients and paid the fine.

Felix W. McGetrick, counsel for the Law Enforcement League entered a protest against pleas of nolo.

The pleading guilty of a corporation and its subsequent fining does not materially aid the enforcement of the Liquor laws. When members of a corporation so found guilty were brought into court for the same offence a second time, they should be held personally responsible, and should be given full sentences instead of being let off with a light fine, which they can easily pay.

Wanted Guests to Testify.

Counsel McGetrick following the fining of the hotel men at once petitioned Chief Watson of the Lynn Police for search warrants for a second investigation of the Hotel Preston.

Mr. McGetrick asked for warrants for a number of the guests of the hotel as witnesses. He further said a few guests had of their own free will consented to become witnesses for the prosecution.

"We shall not let this matter rest until all the offenders have been brought to book, said Mr. McGetrick, "and if the same offences are committed over again then the punishments must be inflicted again and again with increasing severity."

The fining of the two hotel proprietors is a victory for the Law Enforcement League, that mysterious organization which began a crusade which led to the Brookline Country Club paying a fine of $100 for violation of the liquor law. No one has yet been able to learn the names of the members of this form of this organization, or the reason for its war against illegal liquor selling in fashionable hotels and clubs.

Raid Causes Excitement.

Yesterday the North Shore Grill at Magnolia, which is in the residential district, somewhat was raided by Patrolman Fuller, Brown and Knowles. They drove up in an automobile and while waiting in the restaurant, say they saw champagne served by a party of men and women. At the bar they found a gallon of whiskey, two quarts of brandy, three gallons of champagne, and ale, rum and cordials, which they took to the police station.

The raid caused no end of excitement along the North Shore colony, it being the first successful one ever made on that resort. The place had been frequently denounced by town officials, but the sudden enforcement of the law is said to be due to the activity of the officials of the Law Enforcement League.

BLOOD RICHER ON PIKE'S PEAK

But Most Anaemic People Cannot Go There to Live.

Announcement by International Medical Scientists Bears Out in a Remarkable Manner the Recommendations Made for a Well-Known Household Remedy.

The following news item was recently sent out by the press associations and published by the leading newspapers throughout the world:

Colorado Springs, Col., July 29.

"The proportion of red corpuscles in the blood is 40 per cent. greater at this altitude than at sea level. This is an indication of purer blood in high altitudes than at sea level.

Red corpuscles are the oxygen carrying agencies of the blood and because oxygen is a purifier it necessarily shows that the greater the number of red corpuscles the above sea level, the greater the purity of the blood and the greater its disease repelling power.

These statements are made by the four eminent medical scientists who are studying the effect of altitude upon humanity on the summit of Pike's Peak, 14,147 feet above sea level.

The group of scientists whose experiments have extended over several weeks is made up of two doctors of medicine from Oxford University, England, one from Yale and one from Colorado College.

The above news dispatch was of great interest to thousands of people who are suffering from thin or impure blood but who are not in circumstances that will permit them to move to the mountains and live in a climate where the blood becomes rich and pure.

Facts Clearly Stated.

For such people the chief interest in the statement of the Pike's Peak scientists lies in the clear statement of four facts:

First, that red corpuscles are the oxygen carrying agencies of the blood.

Second, that oxygen is a purifier.

Third, that the greater the number of red corpuscles, the greater is the purity of the blood.

Four, that the greater the purity of the blood, the greater is its disease repelling power.

It follows from the above that any agency that will increase the number of red corpuscles will purify it and increase its power to resist disease.

Thus the announcement of the distinguished scientists on Pike's Peak is a direct confirmation of the claims made for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, the direct action of these pills being to increase the red corpuscles in the blood, making it rich, red and pure. That they actually do this is not a matter of argument, for it is proved by microscopic count. And any sufferer from a disease caused by poor blood can tell that after the blood becomes richer the pains and aches, sleeplessness and lack of appetite disappear.

"The Blood is the Life."

Good health is more nearly a question of pure blood than most people think.

When the blood becomes thin and impure the system breaks down at its weakest point, perhaps the nerves or the stomach. But the trouble is in the blood and when the blood is restored to its normal condition the disease, whether of the nerves or stomach, is cured.

There can be no permanent cure of a trouble caused by thin blood until the blood is built up.

The announcement of the Pike's Peak scientists emphasizes the fact that pure blood is really the great "cure all." It shows that a remedy like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People that will enrich and purify the blood is useful in preventing and curing diseases most usually classed as diseases of the blood.

If you are interested in the cure of any disease dependent upon poor blood, such as anaemia, rheumatism, stomach trouble, nervous disorders, after-effects of the grip and of fevers, write to-day for the booklet, "WHY RED BLOOD MEANS HEALTH." It will be mailed free to any address.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are on sale at all druggists', or they will be sent to any address by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

WOMAN HAS JUDGE HALED INTO COURT

BIDDEFORD, Me., Aug. 5.—Judge Peery N. H. Lombard of the Old Orchard Municipal Court and Chief of Police Elmer E. Hanson, also of Old Orchard, were held in $200 each in Biddeford Municipal Court on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Hannah M. Estes of Old Orchard. According to the stories told in court Mrs. Estes had let one of her cottages at Old Orchard to a party of teachers from Lowell, Mass. When the teachers came to take possession she presented them with a bill for the month's rent in advance. The teachers attempted to take their baggage from the cottage. Then it was alleged that the chief of police was called in and that he and Judge Lombard attempted to enter the cottage without a warrant and Mr. Estes was injured slightly.

FEAR ASTOR WEDDING WILL RESULT IN WAR AMONG NEW YORK'S 400

Colonel Astor is as anxious to have his bride-elect at the capital of wealth and fashion that everybody in Newport is taking a decided interest in his romance. He is so much in love that instead of waiting quietly in Newport for the coming of Miss Force, Colonel Astor boarded his yacht Noma Friday evening to sail for New York and pay love a call today. It is expected that he will remain here until the Forces are ready to start for Newport. It would not surprise society in the least if Mr. and Mrs. Force went to Newport to-night on Colonel Astor's yacht, which is big enough to cosset around the world and much more painful in appointments than the average king and queen could afford to have.

Forces Going to Newport.

In Newport it is understood that the Force family will rent a cottage on Bellevue avenue, which is an exceedingly fashionable district, and that the one selected is located between Webster street and Narragansett avenue, on the Woodbury Kane cottage is in that latter section, and it is being very especially observed. The Force house in New York city is at No. 18 East Forty-sixth street, and preparations for the migration to Newport have made it the scene of remarkable activity for a New York mansion in midsummer.

Miss Force went to a Summer resort not far from New York on Friday, and as soon as Colonel Astor's yacht anchored off the New York Yacht Club's landing this morning he hurried in a big motor car to the place where his fiancee is sojourning.

Will Pick from Astor Jewels.

There is no knowing that he took her any gifts, but society gossips are wondering if he came to the bride-elect gems that cost enough to pay a king's ransom. It is said that during the thirty-six hours Colonel Astor and Miss Force were separated he may almost constantly in communication with her both by wire and telephone, and for a gentleman who has always displayed so much pulse and reserve society is quite astonished at him in the role of the impetuous lover. It is understood that for the wedding gifts from the bridegroom Miss Force will not only be showered by gems he has bought for her but that she will be allowed her pick of the Astor jewels. They are one of the most valuable collections in existence. Then it is also expected that he will settle a vast fortune upon her as a wedding gift.

Many Fetes Are Planned.

Many social functions at Newport to honor Miss Force have been planned by Colonel Astor. Among the affairs which will enliven August there will be a great ball at Beechwood, his magnificent Summer home, and much more painful in appointments than the average king and queen could afford to have.

Assured Social Position.

"The attitude of society justifies her after she becomes Mrs. Astor remains to be seen. Colonel Astor has many friends and many enemies. With the aid of his wealth, his magnificent homes, his yachts, his stables and golf links he can provide his bride with infinite resources for entertaining and with all the prestige of a commanding position. But intelligent leadership, especially along social lines, is something which will require much energy by the bride, has been multiplied many times by the ostentation of persons outside of society. Nothing could possibly be told at this time about the attitude of society people towards Miss Force. She has not been formally presented as yet and in the light of etiquette is unknown in society. Her social future depends upon her personality. A clever, magnetic girl will easily carry all before her. No one can be titled and entitled to society unless of a captivating personality.

Social War Possible.

There are several women in the Four Hundred who are classed as society queens and some folks who are versed in the ways of fashionable personages have predicted that there would be a war begun upon young Mrs. John Jacob Astor as soon as she left the altar. But an answer to this which is said to be authorized by Mrs. Dresel and Mrs. Ogden Mills, denies there is any such proceeding in prospect. The statement says:

"Such stories are absurd and lack even a shadow of truth. They were fabricated after the culmination of persons outside of society. Nothing could possibly be told at this time about the attitude of society people towards Miss Force. She has not been formally presented as yet and in the light of etiquette is unknown in society. Her social future depends upon her personality. A clever, magnetic girl will easily carry all before her. No one can be titled and entitled to society unless of a captivating personality.

TOGO IS FETED AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Admiral Togo, naval hero of Japan, who arrived here from New York last night, to-day entered on the round of entertainments arranged in his honor as the nation's guest. The admiral was up bright and early at his suite in the New Willard Hotel and after breakfast remained in his apartment for about an hour. A little later, accompanied by Baron Uchida, the Japanese minister, the stalwart called on Secretary of State Knox and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop, who is acting secretary in the absence of Secretary Meyer. The calls were soon returned by Secretary Knox and Mr. Winthrop at the hotel.

After these ceremonies were over the admiral held a reception for an hour and a half to officers of the United States navy at the hotel. Practically every naval officer in Washington attended the reception. A large crowd surrounded the hotel entrances, hoping to catch a glimpse of the admiral while the naval officers were arriving in carriages and automobiles. The admiral was assisted in receiving by Lieutenant Hamilton Hale, Assistant Secretary of State Huntington Wilson and Ensign Ito, who was detailed by the navy department to act as aide-de-camp to the admiral during his visit. President Taft's military aide, Lieutenant Commander Palmer, U. S. N., and the Japanese naval aides, Captain Ito and Captain Yamaguchi, were also present.

This afternoon President Taft receives Admiral Togo at the White House. Afterward the distinguished visitor will be taken quietly around the city. The day will end with a dinner at the White House, to be followed by a public reception. To-morrow the nation's guest will go on Monday he will go on to Mount Vernon on the President's yacht, the Mayflower, will have luncheon on board and will visit the Indian head grounds. Monday evening Secretary Knox will entertain him at dinner. Tuesday he will go to Annapolis to visit the naval academy and at night will dine with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop.

BE A FIGHTER TO RETAIN YOUTH, IS ADVICE OF TOGO

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—"The secret of retaining youth?"

Admiral Togo, the Samurai Admiral who smashed the Russian navy to pieces in the great naval battle of Tsu Shima Straits, repeated the question slowly.

Then, in a tone better suited to the bridge of a flagship than a parlor, he said: "Fight! Be a soldier."

"That's not very original, but it gives him his greatest contentment and satisfaction to do. Always as a good soldier to war or peace.

"It's the soldier in a man makes him a success in life. It makes the good citizen. It makes the good financier. It makes the successful lawyer. It makes the highest type of patriot. It makes a man who, when the end of his days comes, can go to his fathers with the realization of a life well spent.

Thus the grizzled hero of the East answered the first question put to him in his interview for the AMERICAN—the first he had granted since his arrival in this country to be the guest of the United States. He was seated comfortably in a spacious apartment in his private car attached to the Congressional Limited, which carried him to Washington. He was dressed in a black cutaway and black and white striped trousers and he wore a plain black satin tie. His jewelry was about his person consisted of a large linked gold chain. The question was prompted by the appearance of youth that shows through his bronze firm skin. His eyes are bright and clear, in spite of his sixty-eighth milestone. His hair is thick and scarcely tinged with gray and his step bright, eyes are the eyes that never grow old.

"And what of your women—should they, too, be fighters in other words, Admiral, are you a suffragist?

Admiral Togo ran his hand through his hair and smiled broadly. "No, I am not a suffragist. I believe that women have equal rights with men, but I do not believe in the 'higher education' for women?" he was asked.

"Indeed I do not. The proper sphere of 'higher education' and yours do not agree. To me, the highest, noblest type of woman can have is that which makes her believe that the greatest duty she owes the state is giving to the nation children—future citizens. What does a woman want with the education solely given to men? I am not a suffragist, but I do believe that women have equal privileges with men—but the gets all the education she needs.

"Here, in this country, I believe your women have equal privileges with men. Economic conditions that have resulted in taking women's former employment out of the home is the excuse given for this.

KAISER READY TO BACK DOWN

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Many of the German newspapers to-day contain bitter attacks on Kaiser William in which he is sarcastically referred to as "William, the Peaceful," the "Valorous Peltroon" and other similar characterizations. The question is being asked here:

"Is the Kaiser really getting ready to back down on the Moroccan trouble?"

Paris hears that Germany shows a tendency to yield.

"Nevertheless," says a dispatch from Paris, "it cannot be disguised that there still is a considerable rancor between Germany's protestations and the convictions France is disposed to make, and that while the turn taken by the negotiations evokes satisfaction, exaggerated optimism is out of place until further interviews between Messrs. Cambon and Herr von Kiderlen Waechter result in a complete agreement."

The Kaiser is to-day in conference with his ministers on the Franco-German English situation, having postponed his intended trip to Wilhelmshohe, where the Empress is ill.

Major von Kiderlen Waechter is chief of the general staff of the whole army, especially because he has not obtained a fulfilment of his desires and the French diplomats are prepared to act as outbursts of indignation among patriots on both sides of the river.

Pan Germans Violent.

The first indications of indignation appear in the Pan-German Post and the Zukunft, the organ of Maximilian Harden. The leading article in the Pan-German Post to-day not only attacks the Foreign Minister, Von Kiderlen Waechter, and the Imperial Chancellor, Von Bethmann Hollweg, and demands their retirement from office, but makes a savage onslaught upon Emperor William, asking, "What has happened to the Hohenzollerns?"

It also calls for Europe the strongest support of the Anglo-French policy and continues:

"We will not yet believe what Knglish and French newspapers have said for weeks, namely, 'Wait until your Emperor returns and then the retreat will be sounded and Germany will cede.'"

The Pan-German Post concludes by calling the Emperor "William the Timid and "the Valorous Peltroon."

Kaiser at Conference.

It is understood that Russia played the part of a mutual friend and interposed at London and Paris to take the rough edges off the English attitude, the challenging tone of which for a time threatened nothing to peace than the actual subject of the negotiations.

Emperor William, who had planned to join Empress Augusta Victoria at Wilhelmshohe, never started for Cuxhaven and to-day will confer with Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg and Foreign Minister von Kiderlen Waechter.

It is officially stated that the Emperor has postponed his trip to Wilhelmshohe because of the illness of the Empress, personally this is on account of danger of infection.

The illness of Her Majesty, which was at first described as heart attack, has resulted in a feverish inflammation of the throat. It is not considered dangerous, however, according to her doctors and her physicians have ordered perfect quiet for her.

Kaiser at Conference.

It is understood that Russia played the part of a mutual friend and interposed at London and Paris to take the rough edges off the English attitude, the challenging tone of which for a time threatened nothing to peace than the actual subject of the negotiations.

Emperor William, who had planned to join Empress Augusta Victoria at Wilhelmshohe, never started for Cuxhaven and to-day will confer with Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg and Foreign Minister von Kiderlen Waechter.

It is officially stated that the Emperor has postponed his trip to Wilhelmshohe because of the illness of the Empress, personally this is on account of danger of infection.

The illness of Her Majesty, which was at first described as heart attack, has resulted in a feverish inflammation of the throat. It is not considered dangerous, however, according to her doctors and her physicians have ordered perfect quiet for her.

SEEK NICKERSON CLEW ON BOAT

Coroner Eugene H. Lincoln went aboard the Joy Line steamer Georgia at Providence to-day and questioned all of the officers and others who were on the boat on the night of July 20 as to what they knew about the tragic death of Mrs. Lilly C. Nickerson of Jamaica Plain, who, her friends believe, was the victim of murder.

The Joy Line boatmen have declared that Mrs. Nickerson committed suicide, but there are many features of the mysterious case that weaken this theory.

Coroner Lincoln, it was understood, today, had dug up evidence that indicated more strongly than ever that the woman was the victim of a crime.

Coroner Lincoln communicated what he learned on the Georgia to Coroner Gifford of Little Compton, and as a result summonses were made out for several members of the crew. They will be served when the boat makes its next stop at Providence Monday.

It is probable that the Joy line people will appear at the inquest in Little Compton on Wednesday and Friday. In connection with the affair Coroner Gifford said:

"Intimate friends of Mrs. Nickerson in Jamaica Plain have agreed to appear at the inquest on notification by telegraph."

Carefully Guard Evidence.

The evidence is being carefully guarded. It is believed that the evidence has to do with a wound found on the body other than the one in the woman's forehead.

Not every individual connected with that secret service men will be called upon to clear up the mystery of how Mrs. Nickerson met her death.

While District Attorney Charles A. Wilson of the Rhode Island district is reticent in regard to his plans, it was said by a federal official that the staff of the federal government sleuths would naturally follow if the coroner's conducting the inquest find that the woman was murdered on the high seas.

"The District Attorney would turn the case over to United States Marshal Ballou of Rhode Island, but he would also request Chief Wilkie of the secret service to assign some of his men to assist the marshal," said the federal officer.

"Marshal Ballou and his deputies would dig up all the evidence possible around Rhode Island, but the secret service men would carry on the investigation in Boston, New York and other places where clues might lead them. The secret service men would also work aboard the steamer Georgia in the hope of picking up a clew.

Inquest Adjourned.

"While Marshal Ballou and his deputies are equipped in every way for their positions, it is obvious that they could not do as well on the case as the secret service men, who have had many years of experience in detective work. Then Chief Wilkie, as the head of the secret service bureau, would direct the case, and you may be sure he would do his best to have it cleared up."

The inquest begun by Coroner Lincoln of Providence and Coroner Gifford of Little Compton in the town hall at Little Compton, has been adjourned until next Monday.

Among those whom the coroners have already decided to summon are Captain Asaiah Kelley, Purser Hamilton and Second Steward Talbot, members of the crew of the Joy line steamer Georgia. Summonses, on these, and other members of the crew will be served by the coroners' officials to-morrow morning when the Georgia returns to Providence from New York.

No summonses will be served at first on the Boston people who were intimate with Mrs. Nickerson, but they will be requested to appear if they refuse to do so or if their testimony is considered important, they will be summoned under the interstate reciprocal law.

Raymond Nickerson, husband of the dead woman, will also be requested to appear before the coroners, and he will probably be the first witness of the witnesses to testify when the inquest reopens on Monday.

Haven't Found Porter.

If the authorities fail to-day to establish the identity of the mysterious porter of the Georgia who is said to have told of being called to Mrs. Nickerson's stateroom at 4 a. m., a warrant for his arrest will be issued, and every effort will be made to locate him.

It is reported that detectives who have been delving into the mystery of the woman's death will appear as witnesses and give important testimony.

The only important testimony on the first day of the inquest was that of Medical Examiner Stimson, who declared, it is said, that the woman was murdered. Stimson was murdered. This statement was given out by the coroners at the close of the secret hearing.

The first witness, Ellis Wilbur, told of finding the body. The second witness, Edward W. Pierce, town sergeant of Little Compton, told of his connection with the case. The third and last witness, Medical Examiner Stimson, testified in regard to the autopsy on the body of the woman. The inquest will probably be reopened on Monday.

New light will be thrown upon this mysterious steamer tragedy in a comprehensive story to be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Fra Elbertus with His Hair Trimmed

Much has been said about Elbert Hubbard's recent $500 "hair cut." All the pictures show it was not so much of a hair cut, considerable covering being left on the Fra Elbertian head. The suspenders or "galluses" also are to be noted. It begins to look as if the Fra is becoming conventionalized.

Elbert Hubbard—Fra Elbertus of East Aurora—is in town. And the Fra is wearing a hair cut and suspenders! Fact! The Fra hates 'em both, but they won't last long.

His underwear the haircut on June 18, and it will soon be lost to all except history, for the Fra's hair is growing fast. About the why of the hitherto unheard of suspenders, the Fra is silent. He always wore a belt. See, he has on suspenders, for there's the picture. Find out why if you can. The soft low collar and tie were there, and the Fra was full of right up-to-the-minute epigrams, but Boston is accustomed to these.

Silent as to the suspenders, the Fra was also almost as uncommunicative on the subject of the hair cut.

It seems that William Marion Reedy visited the Fra in his house at East Aurora, and after quite a discussion of Hubbard's unconventional ways, he wagered that the Fra lacked the courage to part with the long wavy hair he had worn for the last twenty years. According to dispatches at the time everybody at the barber shop where the haircut was shorn, and the wager paid.

Elbert Hubbard was very reticent about the matter yesterday, which is by no means unusual.

He was most amiable about posing for his photograph, and plodded around on his chair, in shirt sleeves and suspenders, for snap shots from every point of view. But when it came to questions about his last hair cut, he dodged.

"I believe in everybody wearing their hair the way they like it. That's the way I wear mine, just as it is most comfortable for me. I have modified it somewhat lately. I used to wear it longer, but I think this length is better."

Finally he admitted there had been a hair cut along about the 19th of last June, but he said it wasn't anything exciting, he just had his hair trimmed, not cut off short. And that was all the Fra would say. His would not admit he got Bill Reedy's $500.

SCOTS FLOCK TO ANNUAL PICNIC

Thousands of people poured through the gates of Caledonia Grove to-day to attend the annual picnic and games of the Caledonian Club. At noon fully 10,000 were inside the park and the crowds were still coming. Indications were that the record of 20,000 attendance, made last year, would be broken. The program was the most elaborate the club has ever held.

Hundreds of members of the club assembled long before 8 o'clock at the corner of Washington and Eliot streets, and, led by bagpipes and drummers, marched through the downtown streets on their way to the South Station, where a special train left shortly before 9 o'clock to bring club members to the grove.

The morning marching through the streets attracted much attention. The pick of the Highlander steel is an attraction, but taken in numbers the showing was one of the most brilliant sights seen in the business streets of the city for a long time.

Amateurs Given a Chance.

All arrangements for the monster picnic were completed yesterday afternoon when James A. Sinclair, chief of the Caledonian Club, and his committee in charge of the games, held a meeting at the grove clubhouse to put the finishing touches on the events for to-day.

To-day's plans were somewhat changed from last year, in fact, from previous years of the annual picnic and games. Heretofore it had been the custom of the club to confine its games entirely to professionals and all prizes were for so much consideration. This year, however, it was deemed advisable to put the amateurs and Greater Boston and other places on the track as they would make a big show.

The biggest event on the entire program is the twelve-mile run in which some of the greatest professional runners of the world are entered. Owing to the fact that thousands who would probably like to see the great race would miss it, it was decided the ball game it was decided that the event would not be held until 3:30 o'clock.

Committees Busy All Day.

The various committees of Scots had their hands full all day. The ticket committee was kept busy handling the rush at the gates, especially in the early afternoon, when the crowds began to pour into the grounds. The committee on tickets admitted the attendance would surpass anything the club has ever seen.

Members of the committees have been hard at work for months laying plans for to-day's outing and the smooth way in which things were run of late is a result of their efforts. Chief James A. Sinclair had assistants in the work: James Urquhart, John Green, Thomas Yeiser, William J. Collins, Peter Niven, Thomas Bell, William Gray, William K. Campbell, Thomas D. Adair, James F. McNeil, John Stewart, William McLaughlin and James Ogston.

A full and complete account of the picnic will be printed in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It will be good reading.

KEITH SHOE MEN ON ANNUAL OUTING

The superintendents, foremen and heads of departments of the George E. Keith Company held their fifth annual outing to-day at Rass Point, coming from Campello, Brockton, Montello and the Braintrees at an early hour and marching from the South Station to 6th wharf, where a steamer took them to Nantasket. There was a ball game, bowling contest and other sports. The music was by the Walt Grove band. Dinner was served at the Relay House and was of the "shore" variety. In the afternoon the party attended the ball game at the Huntington avenue grounds and every player who makes a base hit will get an order for a pair of shoes from Mr. Keith.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 5.—Five men after battling three hours with a twenty-eight-foot shark managed to kill it in the presence of 2,000 persons at Virginia Beach this afternoon.

The shark was caught in a net. Despite the fact four at wre down three of the fire men with one sweep of its tail. When big sticks were poked into its mouth, the big jaws snapped them in two like they were paper. Not until the shark was almost dead, did the men get a rope around its body. The fish weighed more than 1,800 pounds.

START MONDAY ON BIG HOSPITAL

On Monday, thirty-four years after the death of the man whose bequests made the great institution possible, 150 workmen will break ground next to the Harvard Medical School at Huntington avenue and Francis street, for the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, which will eventually comprise fourteen buildings. Four of these will be ready in fourteen months.

The hospital will rank among the great est institutions in the world in equipment and in specialties. About 240 patients will be accommodated at once.

Dr. H. B. Howard, formerly superintendent of the Massachusetts General Hospital, will be superintendent, Dr. Harvey Cushing, surgeon in-chief and Dr. Henry A. Christian, physician in-chief. Dr. Cushing is now a resident surgeon of the Johns Hopkins Hospital of Baltimore and an instructor in the Johns Hopkins Medical School. He is one of the greatest specialists on the nervous system, and his success with most delicate operations upon the brain have been called marvelous by other physicians. Dr. Christian is dean of the Harvard Medical School.

Alexander Cochrane, president of the trustees of the Peter Bent Brigham fund, and his associates not only want the hospital to be used primarily for the care of the sick, as the testator stipulated, but that it should serve as an educational purpose for medical students and practicing physicians. For this reason, among others, it is near the Harvard Medical School was chosen. It is the belief of the trustees that Peter Bent Brigham intended the hospital be used for the care of persons suffering with acute diseases, and that infants will be carried out

Provisions of the Will.

The hospital will be directed by the trustees, not by officials of the Harvard Medical School, although the corps of the medical school will nominate the visiting staff of the hospital.

Mr. Brigham's will provided that at the expiration of twenty-five years from his death his executors should dispose of the residue of the property and of all the interest and accumulations that should have accrued thereon for the purpose of founding a hospital in Boston. On Jan. 24, 1902, the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital took over the real and personal estate, appraised at $4,226,168. May 24, 1900, the property had appreciated to $5,045,255.51, at June 1, 1911, Treasurer Draper named these members of the corporation to represent the estate: President Garfield, and John P. Reynolds, Jr., of Boston.

The hospital is primarily intended in the will "for the care of sick persons in indigent circumstances residing in the county of Suffolk."

Peter Bent Brigham was the son of Uriah and Elizabeth (Fay) Brigham. He was born in Bakersfield February 4, 1807. He came to Boston as a boy, served in the fish and oyster business, sold at first from a wheelbarrow, then acquired a lease of Concert Hall, a well known restaurant, which he conducted until 1859. He was a director of the Fitchburg railroad until his death in 1877.

In his will the executors were given full power as to sale, lease and management of the real estate, to change and make investments and to treat stock dividends, in their discretion, as belonging to the principal or income of the estate.

Robert Codman and Joseph Healy of Boston were appointed executors, and it was provided by the testator that no bond should be required of either. Mr. Healy died soon after Mr. Brigham, and the property remained in sole control of Mr. Codman until his death in January, 1910, when his son, Edmund D. Codman, and Laurence H. B. Johnson were appointed trustees.

Trustees Win Suit.

In 1902 they formed a corporation called the "Peter Bent Brigham Hospital." The general court authorized the hospital to hold "for the purposes for which it was incorporated, real and personal estate to an amount not exceeding $5,000,000 in addition to including the amount that it is already authorized by law to hold," etc., approved. Over this provision litigation was carried on by certain heirs. The United States supreme court decided recently in favor of the trustees.

The Peter Bent Brigham Hospital on Parker Hill, designed for incurables, is already completed. Peter Bent Brigham and his nephew, Robert P. Brigham, have been engaged through their executors, in a race to see which shall equip Boston with the finest hospital. It is said that the bequest of the nephew was made in a codicil to the will of his uncle.

The careers of the two men, both of whom came to Boston from Bakersfield, Me., were alike. The tools of each for many years the restaurant business. Their great success was due chiefly to foresight in purchases of real estate.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—After a day of rest, the Rustlers will go after this afternoon's game with Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals, determined to make it two straight. Tenney's men figured that Thursday's rain robbed them of a victory, for Weaver was "going good" and Boston had a lead of one run in four innings.

Weaver was to be started again to-day, and the Rustlers are confident he can take the measure of the locals, who have dropped four straight.

The acquisition of Mike Doolin and Jack Coombs, the fast Southern League outfielder, has sent Boston stock up. The outfield really looks like a good one now, and the infield will be strong when Bridwell joins the team and Gowdy is able to take his place at first base.

St. Louis fans have almost given up the idea of cheering a pennant winner, but there are still enough of them with confidence in the Cards to insure a good crowd this afternoon.

A double-header will be played to-morrow, and the game postponed from Thursday will be pulled off during the September visit of the Rustlers to St. Louis.

TENNEY TO HAVE A GOOD CHANCE

"All this talk of Kling or Doolin as managers of the Rustlers is rot, for Fred Tenney is to be given a fair show," is the statement given out by President William Hepburn Russell.

"From the Spring up to the present time Tenney hasn't had a show," declared Russell. "The team he has now will tell a different story. With Kling behind the bat and Doolin and Bridwell back in the game, there should be a marked improvement in the team.

"Doolin was never in better shape than he is to-day. He is a little thin, but will get back his old speed, I am sure. He will take it easy for a while, but you notice he was prompt in reporting to the team. Bridwell told me he wished he was in as good shape as Doolin, so I think the fans need have no fear in that quarter.

"Doolin has done wonderful work with the stick, coming up only as a pinch hitter and I know he will hit well played regularly. He is perfectly satisfied to come to Boston. I wouldn't have signed him unless other conditions.

"Bridwell will report to the team either at St. Louis or at Cincinnati.

"Bridwell has signed for two years, while the contract with Doolin is for the remainder of the present season. I am willing to make it for next season, however."

BURKETT AFTER BROCKTON MEN

BROCKTON, Aug. 5.—Jesse Burkett, during a recent appearance here, called Outf Henriksen, Brockton's crack outfielder and hitter, to the Worcester bench. After a chat, Burkett paid Manager Steve Flanagan a roll and offered $2,000 cash for Henriksen, explaining that he knew where he could get that amount for the player.

Flanagan, knowing that Burkett is always looking out after J. B. first, turned down the offer; whereupon the wise one offered a like amount for Klondike Smith. This was also turned away, for Flanagan believes that if Burkett offers $2,000 for each of them, they are worth at least $3,000 each.

Henriksen is one of the fastest men in the league; he is a nice outfielder, and leads the Brockton team with the willow with .359, and is pretty close to the top in the league standing.

Klondike Smith is a crack fielder, a good all-round player, an excellent thrower and can hit hard and at the proper time.

The Red Sox, St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati have already looked these players over and it is expected that a deal will be closed for one or both of them within a short time.

DAVIS IS NAPS NEW MANAGER

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Captain Harry Davis, given credit with being at least 25 per cent. of the brains of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club will manage the Cleveland club of the same league next season.

This statement is made upon the authority of one of the scouts of the Cleveland club, who was in this city a few days ago, who declared that not only would Davis manage the club, but that an agreement had already been signed, witnessed and sealed and is now reposing in the safe at the Cleveland club headquarters.

The salary called for by the agreement, which is sort of a pre-contract affair, is $12,000 for the playing season. Whether there is any sliding scale on the upward trend, should the Cleveland club win the pennant, the scout failed to say.

The Cleveland club started negotiations with Davis several months ago and made him an offer of $10,000 for the season if he would don the managerial garb.

It is said that the management of the club that this figure was no inducement to him, as he had been considering a Cuban proposition, which he thought would net him at least that figure, and being in business he would not have to adhere to strict training, and could live the life of a country gentleman in Cuba.

GIRLS TO START IN BOSTON LIGHT SWIM

Miss Ethel Butcher, of Athens street, South Boston, and Miss Marguerite Dolan, of Dorchester avenue, South Boston, will attempt the Charlestown Bridge to Boston Light swim to-day. Both girls are well-known swimmers in their respective districts and many of their friends believe they will accomplish the hard battle.

The girls have been training at the L street bath all season and they have made several long swims in preparation for to-day's try. The girls are strong and muscular and are very confident that they will be successful. It is also expected that several men will start the swim at the same time.

RIFLE SHOOT SEPT. 1.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 5.—The official program for the twenty-first annual rifle tournament at Sea Girt will begin on Friday morning, September 1, and continue until Saturday evening, September 9. Military and civilian marksmen from all sections of the country are expected.

DETROIT TEAM IN HARD LUCK

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Tigers are down on their luck. No one would suspect them of it to see them on the ball field. There they are still full of pepper and fight, and they work hard even when the score shows them to be far behind. But after the day's work is over, they talk over their misfortunes mournfully, and wonder why they are not favored by the fates as some others, meaning the Athletics, are.

The chief bit of hard luck that befell them this season was the injury to Del Gainer, which took that promising young man off first base and forced Hugh Jennings to switch around the right side of his infield. But Gainer has been out so long that the Tigers have almost forgotten that he ever existed. Right now the things that they run up against daily are the ones that bother them and cause them to wonder what they have done to deserve such a bad break from fortune.

The complaint alleges, first, that bases on balls given by their pitchers are always, or almost always, turned into runs, while those given by opposing pitchers don't make any difference; second, that every lucky error comes at a time when it hurts, while the boots accumulated by their foes are harmless; third, that opponents save up all their wonderful pitching and miraculous fielding (not intentionally) and get rid of these things when they are playing the Tigers, so that they are nothing left to score against the Athletics; fourth, that ground balls hit by opponents take on a manner of crazy bounds, while the balls hit hardest by the Tigers go straight at opposing fielders and usually result in double plays. There are other things, too, but we have forgotten them.

Said one of the Tigers last night:

"No team can win a pennant unless it has the luck that usually falls to a winning club. We have been going along without that luck, and the only wonder is that we have held first place so long with everything breaking against us. No club ever won a championship by playing perfect ball all the time. The teams that win are the teams that can play bad ball occasionally and still have luck enough to win. It's not so with us. When we win games, we win them because we don't make any mistakes. But the minute we slip up on anything at all, we lose out.

"Don't think for a minute we have given up. It's time luck came our way, and when it does come, just watch us go. If we had won one-half the games this season that we lost because luck wasn't with us, we'd have been so far ahead now that nobody'd be going to the games."

Thus spoke the Tiger and he was in earnest. He voiced the sentiment of the whole bunch. They think they are going to win the championship, but they realize they must have some luck to do it. At present, they are playing as hard as they know how, and waiting for luck to join them.

Baseball storms come up fast and disappear even faster. There was ill-feeling between Bill Carrigan and some of the players after the Wednesday double-header. There is little or none of it now. Down in their hearts, the Detroiters respect Bill for his gameness in refusing to get out of the way of sharp spikes. Heinie Wagner is another whose fearless manner of blocking runners commands respect.

To quote another Tiger:

"You can't get sore on Carrigan or Wagner and stay sore, for the simple reason that neither of them cries when he is hurt. They both know they are taking chances when they plant themselves directly in a runner's path. Sometimes they get spiked and sometimes they don't. But when they do, they take it as a matter of course and have no fault to find with the runner who did the spiking. The fellows who whine are the ones who get our goat.

JOHN I. TAYLOR OFFERS $10,000

DANVILLE, Ill., Aug. 5.—Ten thousand dollars is the pretty sum offered by the Boston American Leaguers to the Danville baseball team for the services of Pitcher Wil Kirwin, First Baseman Dick Staley and Outfielder Henry Ball.

The offer was made Thursday and was taken under consideration. Should they be sold they will not be delivered to the Boston club until after the close of the present season.

The Boston scout who was here was greatly impressed with Kirwin, who has pitched and won twelve straight games.

The St. Louis Browns also made an offer for the same three men, but they were turned down.

The Cincinnati Reds had a scout here and it is understood he was so favorably impressed with Kirwin that he asked for an option on him.

the parent of the American "Black Hand," is at last in the grip of the law. At Viterbo, Italy, thirty-seven leaders of this society are on trial for murder.

Their conviction or acquittal will in large measure determine the fate of the "Black Hand" Society here. Back of the blackmail, kidnapping, murder, and dynamiting, which has characterized the American "Black Hand," has stood the Italian Camorra. With that body out of the way, these outrages should soon cease.

ARMORY OPENS WITH STAR BOUT

By KNOCKOUT.

The professional boxing season gets under way hereabouts in ten days. The Armory A. A. will stage the opening with four rattling good bouts on Tuesday evening, August 15. And they will be some bouts, too, if past deeds count for anything.

The main bout of the evening is between Jimmy Clabby, the star Milwaukee middleweight, and "Buck" Crouse of Pittsburg. The boys will weigh in at 160 pounds at 3 o'clock of the day of the bout.

Both of these cities' spit dispensers are well known to Boston fistic followers of the world of fistiana. The mixer from the city of smoke has displayed his skill here before, and is a hot favorite with the sports, who like to see a good exhibition in the mauly art.

This will be Clabby's first exhibition in Boston since he returned to this country after an extended trip to Australia along with Billy Papke, the Cyclone Johnny Thompson and Kid Brogan. While battling in foreign lands the kid from the city of cooling drinks more than doubled his end of the contract in every engagement.

Clabby is a fighter of the give-and-take kind, who is willing to stand toe to toe with an opponent and swap wallop for wallop. This is not saying, however, that Jimmy is not proficient in foot work. In fact, when he desires, the Milwaukee fa. vorite can circle the ring with the speed of a lightweight.

In Crouse, Clabby will meet a worthy foeman, a boxer who will make him go the limit in order to win.

In the semi-final bout of the evening George Robinson of Cambridge will swap wallops with Joe Brown of Cambridge in an eight-round bout. Both of these men are middleweights of the ebony hue. As both fighters have quite a reputation for mixing things up it should be a slashing mill.

In the curtain raiser John Connolly of Scotland will meet "Young" Miller of Rhode Island in a six-round affair. This go will be followed by another six-round mixup in which Fred Thompson of Chicago and Dave Powers of Malden are to be the principals.

Matty Baldwin, the Charlestown bearcat, departs from these shores today to set out after a couple of lightweights in the West. His first stop will be Indianapolis, where he takes his second crack at Kid Sparkle Burke is one of the few famed lightweights that has been developed for many years and Matty will have to be at his very best to cope with him.

The sports out that way think the world of him and they have a great future all mapped out for him. After that bout Matty will continue to Salt Lake City, where he goes twenty rounds with Johnny Frayne, the Californian lightweight.

The Jim Flynn-Cliff Morris bout will likely be pulled off in New York on Labor Day. The advertising that this bout has received almost assures a record crowd.

Not a thing has been heard of a bout between Eddie Murphy and Matt Wells. A couple of weeks ago they were almost matched, but now they are as far away as if Matt was over in his old country.

REFORMING KIDS PLEASES JOHN L

ABINGTON, Aug. 5.—Work has begun on John L. Sullivan's $4,000 bungalow at West Abington. The structure will be entirely of field rock, which will be gathered on John L.'s farm under his personal supervision.

The ex-champion is looking healthy and prosperous and says he never felt better in his life. He goes out bike-berrying every day and hundreds of kids from Brockton and the Abingtons tag along with him to gather the spherical fruit.

Mothers and fathers are beginning to give John L. credit for reforming their youngsters, for they have been returning home for days with pails full of berries, and have kept out of mischief.

John L. delights in having a hundred or so kiddies along with him and he makes the time fly pleasantly.

He will not allow any of the boys to smoke cigarettes and insists on discipline during berry-picking hours.

HACK SAILS FOR AMERICA AUG. 9

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—George Hackenschmidt is ready to start for the American shores and he is of the firm belief that before he returns to his native land again he will have wrested the heavyweight wrestling championship from Frank Gotch, whom he meets at the White Sox Park on Labor Day, September 4.

The "Russian Lion" is preparing for his trip to this country and has set August 9 for his departure. Before leaving the other side, however, George will establish a record for elaborate training details.

In a letter received by Manager Jack Curley Huck outlines his traveling plans, incidentally remarking that when he steps upon the mat at the South Side baseball park Labor Day he will have expended $3,500 for training expenses—$2,000 more than his training preparations for the Gotch match at Dexter Pavilion four years ago cost him.

"Doc" Roller in Party.

In the Hackenschmidt party aboard the Olympic will be Dr. B. F. Roller, chief trainer; Johann Koch, German athlete; Professor Coleman and a German chef. At New York the big foreign wrestler will pick up Tom Jenkins, who will accompany him to Chicago and arrange all details for the Gotch bout. It is thought that Manager Jack Curley will lease for the Lion's training headquarters.

While there may be no interruption in the system of severe training that Huck has outlined to condition himself for the climax match of his career he has arranged to occupy the gymnasium of the Olympic for three hours each day, utilizing a mat for rough work with Dr. Roller and Johann Koch.

Ten Cases of Special Water.

Ten cases of special spring water obtained in France and utilized exclusively for drinking purposes at the Hackenschmidt training camp will be brought over, and the chef who is located at the Shoreham bungalow will endeavor to bring with him sufficient supply of several kinds of food regularly eaten by the Russian athlete to last until the day of the bout.

"These training precautions," said Curley, "perhaps may appear to be not only extraordinary but quite out of line with Huck's programme on his tour of the country during my direction last Winter. But he does not wish to take any chances of not being in condition. The gymnasium on the Olympic is one of the most complete establishments Huck has seen, and he is more than delighted with this facility for daily training while on the ocean."

Huck's rival celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday anniversary at the Shoreham training camp on July 20, Dr. Roller writing that the big wrestler treated himself to an hour's extra work with the weights, electing to hurl a sixty pound ball to his wrestling partner during most of that period, as if it were a medicine ball.

The Umperiners plucked an easy victory from their opponents, the Starfish Giants, yesterday. Score, 36 to 21. "Hoob" Nelson's aggregation now have a good, strong lead in the race for the pennant.

Whizzlewhaz, the new left fielder of the Umperiners, has certainly made good with a bang. It may be said that he has made good with several bangs.

In yesterday's game he showed "Eagle-beak" Spruder, the veteran pitcher of the Giants, just how far and with what accuracy his best curves can be bounced off a baseball bat. He was five times up, and five times, with a wallop that fairly filled the air, he sent the ball whizzing over the fence in deep center field.

Whizzlewhaz, the man who pulled off the phenomenal stunt of knocking a home run with the bases empty, is in our office, shows him to have two home runs and three three-baggers to his credit.

As far as we know, a new kid around a strange neighborhood never made so much in the history of organized sandlot baseball. There is no doubt that he will get all kinds of offers from other teams before many days have passed.

Yesterday's game was the most spectacular of the season, from a batting standpoint. Anyone who paid a bottle, a sack or a bat full of rags to see it was not cheated a bit. It was well worth the price.

"George Washington." "Hoob" Nelson's genuine common snapper turtle, which was kidnaped in the early part of this week, had not been found. Rattles, the detective who has been detailed on the case, has several clews, but he has not been around to tell us about them. We have invited him up to the house for dinner this evening, and we intend to pump him for Sunday's paper.

The Teacher of Tideburn School

By THOMAS TAPPER

THE teacher of the Tideburn School was a little man. He was, in fact, a bumblebach. If he lacked beauty of body, he certainly had beauty of mind and of soul. His eyes were full of life, and his face shone. This generally means that a man thinks the right kind of thoughts.

I believe the Teacher never lost an opportunity to talk to the children after school. We, I know, never lost an opportunity to gather about him and listen to his stories. They were always simple stories that a child could understand, and I know now that he taught us as much after school as he did listening to us recite our lessons.

Every fine day of the year the Teacher walked down the street after school, past the two stores, and across the way to the courthouse, a beautiful little building for so small a town as Tideburn. It had a fine cupola, and tall colonial columns. It looked like a jewel on a plain dress, standing as it did at the head of the street.

No evening passed when we children were not there before he came: the little ones who went to school to him: the older ones now at work; and often their fathers and mothers.

I well remember one Summer when he told us the story of all the characters in the works of Charles Dickens. He made Little Nell and Paul Dombey, old Mr. Peckniff, Martin Chuzzlewit, Uriah and Tom Pinch as real to us as our own playmates.

But he loved Thackeray more than any other author. I remember him sitting one evening, with his cane across his lap, his long black hair falling over his forehead, and his eyes brighter than usual.

About Thackeray

"Children," he began, "if you are ever shy, or sensitive, or discouraged, you ought to know about Thackeray. He was a shy boy, and at first he did not succeed so very well. When he came to England from India, here' he was been, he was sent to the famous Charterhouse School in London. There used to be some terrible fights among the boys in a corner of the yard; and every fight he saw made Thackeray suffer so much that, in after life, he shuddered at the memory of it. He used to call it the Slaughter House School.

"After a while he went to Trinity College, Cambridge. Among his teachers were many who thought it fine to mock a boy who made a mistake, and to make all manner of fun of him. Then there were rich young men in the college who bullied the poorer ones worse than the teachers did. They were snobs, children, just common snobs, who did not know they were snubbing a boy who would be, one day, one of the greatest of English authors.

"So, after a year, Thackeray left Trinity College, unable to be snubbed by snobs any longer. You may think, children, that he should have paid no attention to it, and have tried not to be shy and sensitive; but remember this, his sensitiveness helped to make him a great writer. You will understand that better some day. Never try to change sensitive people (I don't mean sentimental people, they are sickly chaps) and sneering brutes that say hard words and smart sayings to others.

"Well, Thackeray next set out to become an artist. He went to France and to Germany and studied a while, and then gave it up. Then he made up his mind to be a writer. That was the hardest task he could have selected, for Dickens was living in those days.

"But he worked very faithfully, and, by and by, there came 'Vanity Fair,' 'Pendennis,' 'Esmond' and 'The Newcomes.' Then people knew that Thackeray was a great man. I have often wondered what the snobs at Trinity College thought then."

Just then the bell of Tideburn Church sounded eight o'clock and the blacksmith who lived on the hill began to play a tune on his cornet, as he did every evening of the Summer. We listened until they were done and then the Teacher said:

"That bell always makes me think of Colonel Newcome. Listen to what Thackeray says of him. Every word is simple, except one—'Adsum'—which means 'I am here.'

"At the usual hour the chapel bell began to toll, and Thomas Newcome's hands outside the bed feebly beat time, and just as the last bell struck, a peculiar sweet smile stole over his face, and he lifted up his head a little, quietly said 'Adsum,' and fell back. It was the word we used at school when names were called, and he to whose heart was the first of a little child had answered to his name, and stood in the presence of his Maker.'

"You boys must tell 'Pendennis' some day to see how a man is made. And you girls must try never to be Becky Sharps. And all of you remember what Edward Blake, the Irish Member of Parliament, once said:

"'I read the "Newcomes" once every year to keep my heart free from all shams.'

A Child's Question

"You do the same, children, and you will learn to know who are the great people of the world, and you will study them."

"But how can we study great people in Tideburn?" asked a little girl.

"Bless me," said the Teacher, "Tideburn is full of them. Old Mr. Arkwright, the blacksmith, is a wonderful man. And there is Dr. Smedley. Oh, children, Dr. Smedley is greater than any man I have ever read about in a book. The way he drives over these highways to help the sick, day and night, never complaining, always cheerful; going wherever he is called, often without sleep for days. My, my, children, it makes me sorry that Thackeray did not know Dr. Smedley."

"But that is only two people," said the little girl, "and they wouldn't make a book."

The Teacher smiled, and said:

"Well, well, Amy, I've been making a mistake. I should tell you about the great people in Tideburn instead of in Dickens and Thackeray. We will begin to-morrow evening."

And we all got up to go home, the Teacher leading the way like the Pied Piper.

A Grand Stove

A GEORGIA woman who moved to Philadelphia found she could not be contented without the colored mammy who had been her servant for many years. She sent for old mammy, and the servant arrived in due season. It so happened that the Georgia woman had to leave town the very day mammy arrived. Before departing she had just time to explain to mammy the modern conveniences with which her apartment was furnished. The gas stove was the contrivance which interested the colored woman most. After the mistress of the household had lighted the oven, the broiler, and the other burners and felt certain the old servant understood its operations, the mistress hurried for her train.

She was absent two weeks and one of her first questions to mammy was how she had worried along.

"De Lawd ever," was the reply. "And dat air gas stove—oh my! Why, do you know, Miss Flo'ence, dat fire ain't gon out yit."

A SIGN FOR THE SURGEONS

"Of course," said the surgeon who had operated for appendicitis, "there will be a scar."

"That's all right," replied the patient. "Leave any kind of a mark you like that will prevent some strange doctor from coming along and operating again."

DO YOUR OWN MIXING.

Rough on Rats, the unbeatable exterminator, being all (95%) poison, one 25c. box will spread or make 150 or more rats and mice, and millions of roaches, ants and bedbugs. Not poisonous to handle, only so when eaten.

Don't mix it too strong; let the food used predominate largely. Mix it only about 1 part to 25 or 30 of food used for Rats and one to 40 or 50 for Mice, and change the kind of food used occasionally. But mix it thoroughly. Equally effective for all obnoxious animals, "varmints," etc. Sold by druggists, 50c. and $1. Don't die in the house. 15c., 25c., 75c. boxes. E. S. Wells, Jersey City, N. J.

CUNNING OF RATS.

Rats are too cunning to be caught, more than one or two in the same trap, too cute for the stereotyped ready-for-use things. You may get a few one time, with phosphorous paste, but never again. They instinctively avoid the familiar forms of ready-prepared for use, catch-penny devices. Rough on Rats being a dry, odorless, tasteless powder, and all (95%) poison, with no cheap, inert admixture, can be mixed each time you use it with a different food, thus disguising it, in many ways completely outwitting them. Rats are smart, but Rough on Rats beats them. 15c., 25c., 75c., at Druggists.

The Vanity Box

A Mystery Story of Absorbing Interest

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By ALICE STUYVESANT

"I MEANT to write before I went," he said. But he did not say which one of the two was to have been the recipient of the letter.

"I—I suppose you wouldn't come and dine—just with Terry and me?" Maud hesitated. "You know how glad we should be if—"

"You are very good," he answered, with gratitude which struggled against constraint, "but I—I cannot. I'm not fit—you'll understand. You'll both understand."

"Yes, we understand," said Terry, speaking for the first time, her eyes very gentle and sweet. He looked up at her again, once more with a desperate appeal which she could not interpret. But it so stabbed her heart that she would not let him go with his message to her unread and unanswered. "Is there nothing I—we—can do for you?" she asked, stammering a little, for perhaps it would seem to him a strange question.

Could Do One Thing.

"Thank you many times, no," he began, but stopped on a sudden thought. "Yes, there is one thing you could both do if you would," he said then. "If you just been to see Miss Verney at the vicarage, if you could interest yourselves in her—if you could try to find her a home—a situation of some sort. I'm not more than kind—to me, as well as to her. You see, she is all alone in the world, and——"

"Isn't she—I thought at one time she was engaged to Mr. Barr," ventured Maud, unable to restrain her curiosity.

Sir Ian's face stiffened. "I am not in her confidence," he said. "In any case, that can't help her much now."

Terry was furious to find herself blushing. A strange, new thought sprang into her mind. Could it be possible that Sir Ian cared for Nora Verney more than he wished any one to know?

The instant after this thought had bored its sharp gimlet-point into her heart, it began to seem not so strange. After all, what more natural? Such things came to pass every day.

Miss Verney was young and beautiful. She had lived in the same house with Sir Ian for months. He and began by being sorry for her and ended by loving her. No normal man could help admiring such a pretty girl. The other day, he had said in another to a friend, "It is not for me important, anyhow in this house"; or something like that.

Nothing that Terry had known of him in the past prevented her from thinking him fickle—nothing, at least, except a certain irrepressible instinct which existed in spite of reason, and with nothing to feed upon.

A Horrid Jealousy

A horrid, unworthy jealousy of the lovely young girl turned a leaden screw in Terry Ricardo's breast. She hated herself for it; but it was there, and ached dully, with the same grinding ache which had banished all the joy of life and youth from her girlhood.

"She would conquer it soon, she told herself, and said aloud: "I promise you that Maud and I will do something for Miss Verney. We are on our way now to return a call of Mrs. Haynes, and we will ask for Miss Verney."

"She may refuse to see you," said Sir Ian, anxiously.

"I won't take no for an answer," Terry assured him, accepting the responsibility for herself alone, whatever Maud might do. "I promise you to be her friend, and not to be discouraged if she doesn't want my friendship at first. I will find a way to get at her, and to help her; trust me to do it."

"I do," he said. And then, impulsively, "You are a very noble woman. I have more than I can ever thank you for."

After that, as if he had regretted, or were ashamed of this outburst, he shook hands with them both hastily, pressing Terry's fingers so hard that her rings ground into them under her gloves; and then walked away with long strides, as if he were hurrying to catch a train.

"Poor Sir Ian, he looks haunted!" exclaimed Maud, when she had told her coachman to drive on.

Terry shivered a little, but did not speak.

Terry Has a Plan

"I shouldn't be surprised if he never came back to live at Friars' Moat," Mrs. Ricardo continued, with interest.

Still Terry did not answer.

"I wonder where he will go?" the elder woman pondered aloud.

Terry was looking at the vicarage, which made a pretty picture now, in the midst of its old-fashioned garden. As she looked, Miss Verney came out through a long window, and turned toward the left, not seeing, or appearing to see, the approaching visitors.

"There she goes now!" exclaimed Maud. "I don't see what we can do for her, do you?—unless she'd accept a present of money."

"I don't think she would do that," Terry said. "But I have a plan. It's growing in my mind now. Perhaps I'll ask her to go abroad with me for a little while. Maybe she would like that."

"Go abroad!" Mrs. Ricardo repeated, her eyes very wide. "Why, you have only just come to England. You are visiting me."

"I know," said Terry. "And if I go, I'll come back to you—if you'll have me. But—this horrible thing that has happened seems to have done something odd to my nerves. You said Sir Ian looked 'haunted.' Well, I feel haunted. I can't sleep. And I'm such a fool—I look under the bed every night, and into the wardrobe. That isn't like me. I've been thinking for two or three days that perhaps I might run over to France for a fortnight, until the inquest comes on."

"Even that would be a change. Don't you think it would be a good way of keeping my promise to Sir Ian, if I invited Miss Verney to go as my companion? Afterwards I would find something else."

"I should like to go with you myself," sighed Maud, "only I can't, because a dull but rich aunt of Norman's is coming for a visit, and she's the kind that alters her will if you alter your plans."

"I'll broach the subject to Miss Verney to-day," Terry said, as the carriage stopped at the vicarage door.

"Perhaps she won't go," suggested Maud.

"I will get her to go," said Terry.

At 9 A. M.

ALONG the packed streets, with sunbaked faces and tense looks, a crowd of people is hurrying. Eagerly, keenly, they jostle by each other, and elbow their way forward. Their eyes are strained, as are the eyes of gold-hunters. And gold-hunters, in truth, they represent as they pour along the narrow, swarming roads.

Suddenly a babel of voices stays them, and their thoughts change instantly. Yes, every single thought in that vast mass of humanity! The millionaire rubs shoulders with the tramp. The clerk's sleeve brushes that of the manager. The gold-seeking tide is arrested.

A clatter, a gasp, a delirious murmur of "Ah!" and then, at last, the crowd staggers to its feet, the human throngs resume their hurrying way.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A LACK OF COURTESY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

What is your opinion of the following: Two young ladies attended an affair with a chaperon, and there met several young men who had promised to attend. These young men do not live in this city, and it probably takes an hour or so to reach their respective homes.

At about 12:30 a. m. the party broke up, and we started for home. These young men did not volunteer to escort us home.

Now, Miss Fairfax, will you kindly let me know what you think of the above-mentioned young men? Is it ignorance, or did they depend on the chaperon seeing us home. ETHEL.

THE young men, evidently, felt that you were well chaperoned, and that it was therefore unnecessary to take you home. However, they should have offered to do so. It would only have been courtesy.

DO NOT NAG HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I have been keeping company with a young man whom I like very much; but there is just one fault I find with him. When he comes to see me, it is always after the appointed hour. I have spoken to him about this several times and he always seems to have a good excuse, but I cannot understand why it should happen every time.

Do you really think his intentions are serious, or doesn't he care?

PERPLEXED.

IT is almost impossible, dear girl, for some people to be punctual. If this young man's excuses for his tardiness are always good it should not worry you.

Remember, he would not come to see you if he did not like you. In any case it will be a very good to ask him to explain each time he is late. It might drive him away.

Never nag; it does not pay. It accomplishes nothing.

DECIDE YOURSELVES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Am deeply in love with a woman twelve years my senior. We have known each other for three years and have kept company for over a year.

Having taken everything into consideration, we decided to be married in September, and firmly believe our case will be an exception.

As a last resort we have decided to ask your valued opinion. Why can't our case be an exception to the general belief that a couple so varied in ages will not be happy?

We have both proved our love for each other in our long friendship in a hundred different ways, and are extremely devoted to each other.

A. F.

I BELIEVE the difference in age of which you speak will not interfere with your happiness provided your love has a foundation rendering it indestructible. If your love be founded on friendship, sympathy of mind and purpose, sincere respect and mutual interests, discontent cannot enter to disturb the peace of married life. You are better able to decide this matter. I wish you all happiness and sincerely hope that your case, being an exception, will prove the rule.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

The Foreign Missionary Society Meets With Daysey's Mother

THE Foreign Missionary Society of the church of which Mrs. Lysander John-ings Appleton is a member, met with her one afternoon last week, with "The Work in Our Missions, The Needs of the Workers and Their Aims," the subject under discussion.

The ladies lingered at Mrs. Appleton's for three hours, during which time the following weighty matters were discussed. Mrs. Appleton acting as chairman, and promptly disposed of.

1—That money taken in by the sale of old furniture belongs to the wife.

2—That beef tonic is better, being less dry, if one third pork is used.

3—That there are no songs or orations about the hen, but that she should be the national bird, having done more for her country than the eagle.

4—That when a man laughs ten times, nine of the laughs are inspired by something he said himself. At this period of the deliberations all the women talked at once, and the chairman was unable to restore order.

5—That every woman present was sick enough to be in bed with ice packs around her right at that minute, but that she felt the importance of the work, and refused to let her little trifling ailments interfere or impede so important a movement.

7—That the mortality among infants in Utah would be less if they wore flannel boots around their little stomachs. A flannel bond committee was appointed to act without further instructions.

8—That when a man gets $2 he celebrates it by spending $5; the men, it was agreed unanimously, are worse than so many children.

9—That a battleship be kept in readiness to protect missionaries, and a committee of ladies not present was named to select one for the purpose.

Mrs. Appleton, the business of the day being ended, served cream pickles, and proved her social superiority by serving them so small that they melted like lozenges on the tongue. Old-fashioned women bake them so large they frequently cause dislocation of the jaw, and one sandwich made by an old-fashioned woman contained enough nutriment to do for a whole meal for a family of seven.

"Our missionary society," said Mrs. Appleton to her husband that night, "is a great help to me. It keeps me in touch with Higher Things and Broadens My Outlook and Uplifts Me Spiritually. One woman ate thirty sandwiches, and I feel that meeting like them satisfy every Inward Unrest."

NATURE'S WAY AND OURS

HOW to keep the fragrance and flavor in tea-leaves?

That was Nature's problem and ours.

She solved her part of the problem by sealing up the leaf in a tiny wisp.

Ours was the more difficult task of getting the fresh, uncrushed leaves to you. We solved our problem by filling the canisters from the bottom, instead of through the narrow neck, to avoid crushing, and by double-sealing the top with air-tight parchment.

Hence the morning-fresh flavor of your tea—if you use Chase and Sanborn's.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he watches Claude and the bunch try to lasso him from their perch on the cliff. He wonders where Gomgots has gone, being ignorant of Lieut. Phillip's presence in Horsea. How will the lasso attempt succeed? In Mandeyn this matters no shell see.

Clinging to the narrow ledge, Claude Belaire and the friendly hunters do their best to follow the villain Desmond along the dangerous path. It is a difficult task, but love inspires the hero to do or die. The hunters try to aid Claude, to come all the world loves a lover, and, besides, the hunters would like to see Desmond foiled.

The scoundrel Desmond, with the helpless Rosamond in his grasp, defies the heroic Claude. It is a strange thing, but villains have seldom much respect for the intellects of honorable persons. They would rather work a month to steal a nickel than do one honest day's work for a hundred times as much.

Suddenly Chief Gomgots, the dreaded leader of the Wild Men, appears on the scene. He has captured from Desmond, Rosamond's schoolboy brother, and is now aiding the white villain. Gomgots rolls a heavy wheel along the path, intending to crush Claude. But the hands of Desmond's foes and thus force them to fall down the precipice.

But see! The tire falls off the rolls to the clinging hunters and Claude. When hanging to a ledge a thousand feet above the ground it is hard to dispute much interest in world politics or any other important subject. The hunters so give all their attention to the whirling tire, which may decide their fate.

As a drowning man clutches at straws, so Claude and his imperilled friends strain for the tire and grasp it. They realize that if they hold the tire there may be a chance, as they fall, to hook it over some branch or projection on the cliff and thus, for the time at least, save their lives.

Self-Opinioned Barnaby

By KENNETT HARRIS

BARNABY never read Shakespeare. He never read much of anything not appertaining to the various branches of what he called "sport," or the stock market, which glorious institutions the Universal Genius somehow failed to anticipate. But if anybody had read to Barnaby the Apostrophe to Man, it is long odds that he would have taken it as a direct personal tribute to himself.

Barnaby is bulky, and he distinctly approves of bulky men, and looks scornfully down from his elevation of six-feet-three upon the unhappy undersized; he is pudgy and pink and he likes to see a fine, fresh color and decent roundness of the muscular framework, just as the pasty-faced and lean excite his disgust; he has a rumbling bull-bass voice that he is mighty proud of and he has money, which has surrounded him with parasites from an early age.

Perhaps you can imagine him filling a room with the magnificence of his legs set well apart, his chest well out and his hands in his trousers pockets. He will be dressed in splendor, ornamented gorgeously and groomed to the last grain. If you please him, he will nod in Jovian appreciation; if you annoy him, he wads will throw his plump cheeks upward until his little eyes are squeezed to slits, and if his peculiar sense of humor is aroused sufficiently, seismic rumblings will proceed from his interior, and people in remote corners will sit up and twist their necks.

He Is Everything

If there is anything that Barnaby cannot do better than anybody else, you may depend upon it it's not worth doing. Not worth his while, at least. If there is anything that he doesn't know it is, briefly, but emphatically, "rot," and he will dismiss the subject with this blighting qualification, from which there is no appeal and against which all argument is futile and stifling: "Rot! That's all it is. Rot!"

Can you pull the wool over Barnaby's eyes? Well, I trow not. Wisdom of the Winchester variety has been vouchsafed Barnaby in overflowing measure. That is something beyond all doubt and dispute. And what Barnaby knows, he knows. There is a respectable wad of yellow-backed bills in Barnaby's breeches pocket that sustains his position in language loud, eloquent and convincing. Can you cover it? No? Well, put up or shut up, one of the two. You would better shut up anyway.

Listen. Listen respectfully and admiringly while Barnaby instructs you concerning the law and the prophets, or whether the prophet, for he is Barnaby, and the law is the breath of Barnaby's chick-lipped mouth in the ear of the gilaut legislator, and the wink of Barnaby's pig-like eye. In the two towns that are Barnaby's, the towns where his trilling and spinning is done for him, you may see how thoroughly this divine ordination is recognized. There, like the centurion of old, he says to one, "Go!" and he goeth, and to another "Come!" and he cometh"—hat in hand and in all humility, and sometimes they come, being permitted, and complain, still humbly, of this and that.

But Barnaby checks them. "Rot!" he says. "You will do thus and so." And of course they do it.

Can you suppose anybody having the inestable gall necessary to flout, deprecate and disparage such a being as Barnaby to his florid face?

He Met a Poet

It was at the club and the presumptuous person was a dreamy-eyed literate; by name, Treweck, and by lack of occupation, poet. He was just returned from the West, and was talking to Gleason genial and dark, which work he had viewed from an adjacent mountain peak. "It is a wonderful thing, no doubt," he said. "I suppose it's the biggest and costliest piece of engineering up to date, barring the Panama Canal, but for all the millions of money and years of time, the incessant labor of armies of men, what a tiny scratch and blot it is upon that tremendous landscape! How little we amount to in the face of nature after all!"

"Rot!" observed Barnaby, who had just loomed up.

Treweck looked at him mildly. "Do you thing so, really?" he asked. "When you look at something very big and very old in nature, aren't you sometimes overwhelmed with a sense of your own insignificance?"

Barnaby got a little shaker. "What d'you mean?" he growled.

"Of course, when you're hustling around in your own little nit bills and rubbing shoulders with your fellow ants, you hardly realize it," pursued Treweck, "but in places and solitude, isn't it different?"

"Rot!" said Barnaby, becoming pinker still.

"At night," urged Treweck, "don't you ever look up at the stars—a million of millions of suns with their planets glimmering through inscrutable distances, in space illimitable? Can you contemplate the wonder and marvel of that golden sufficure, that vast and awe-inspiring creation without feeling your utter unconsequence, your less than insect value? Isn't it borne upon you what a crawling, infinitesimal atom you are, what a grain, what a mote, what a helpless—"

Barnaby's pudgy palm, with the force of his brawny arm behind it, swung around and landed in Treweck's cheek with a resounding boffet.

"You insulting vagabond!" roared Barnaby, struggling against those who held him, to repeat the blow. "Let me get at him, I'll show him the kind of a crawling atom I am."

We dragged him away and pacified him with highballs. And really Treweck ought to have known better. I suppose he didn't think about it being Barnaby.

Black and White Are Popular

BLACK and white fabrics have taken a strong hold upon the public. They are excessively pretty and have always been lifted by a certain set of women, but one did not think they were novel enough to have created so much of a real craze. It is in Paris and London, as it is here with us in America," endless amount of these frocks made in all materials and in all widths of stripes.

Linens, ginghams, and lawns are used for the inexpensive one-piece frocks which a woman must have in plenty during the hot weather; then cotton marquisette, voile, chiffon cloth, taffets, and satin are the chosen fabrics for the other class of gowns which are worn for afternoon tea, garden parties, wedding receptions, and card parties.

All this kind of social life takes place in the country now, so that one can indulge in more conspicuous frocks than in the Winter, when town life was the thing.

The combination of black and white has been in the forefront of fashion for a year in Paris. It began when the English Court went into mourning for Edward VII., and it was supposed to cease when colors were worn by the Court set, but not so; the public liked the idea and held on to it.

In fact, the whole world went into half mourning, or, to be more exact, that part of it that pays attention to the fashions in clothes. Of course in the happy lands of the Orient the women folk wear the same kind of gowns for two thousand years, and thus are immune from the anxiety of changing fashions.

A Thrilling Story of Wireless and War

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By ARTHUR STRINGER

Copyright, 1909, by R. W. Dodge & Company. Entered at Stationers' Hall, London. All rights reserved.

IT brought the thought through him like an arrow that he had openly pledged himself to two opponents, that he had made a promise to act for two enemies.

This was followed by a second and an equally disturbing thought: he had not once been honest or open with her; he was letting his lack of candor make her path a harder one than she deserved.

He sprang through the door after her, sweeping a sudden fierce fire of self-hate, of contempt for the things in which he found himself involved.

Called Her Back

A moment later he had called her back across the midnight gloom of the dipping and rocking deck.

"What is it?" she asked, as she stepped into the cabin, her eyes wide with wonder. He made sure the deck was empty, and closed the door. Then, with an obvious effort, he wheeled about and faced her.

"It may not be too late for us to get out of this mess," he told her, "and get out of it in the right way."

"But what way?" she asked, puzzled by his unheralded change of front.

"The quick way, and the sure way," he answered, swinging across the cabin until he stood before his switch-layer. His hand hovered about the apparatus as he went on. "I mean our way out is to get the Princeton now, to-night, before she's out of touch with us! I mean it's best for us to play our card at once, when it's not too late!

"The Princeton has already passed us on her way to Culebra, to replace the gunboat Eagle; she's leaving us farther and farther behind every hour!"

"But what do we gain by getting the Princeton now?" Alicia Boynton demanded.

He was at the key by this time, and the "crash—rash—rrrash" of the great spark as it leaped and exploded from the discharging-rods filled the cabin with a percentory and authoritative tumult of sound. The woman stood watching him, spellbound. A moment later McKinnon's left hand was fidgeting above his toner, while his right pressed a 'phone-receiver close to his ear.

"What we've got to do is to get that cruiser to Puerto Lecomba," he hurriedly went on, as he waited there, without looking up. "She will be needed; she is needed; and she may as well be told of it now. I mean we'll do what we've got to do while the way's still clear."

"I'll Make Authority"

"But how can you order about an American warship as though it were a street cab you'd hired?"

"It won't be me—it'll be the wireless that does the ordering."

"But who are you?"

"That's just it—I'm nobody! I'm like those canaries you spoke of: I wouldn't be worth cannonading."

"But you have no power to do this!" demurred the still puzzled woman. "You are not the President of the United States! You have no authority to order about a battleship!"

"I'll make the authority!" he cried as he sprang to his key and once more called through the night. "You've said just enough to give me my chance to make my coup plain. American interests are threatened in Guarlqui at this very moment; American property has already been destroyed in Puerto Lecombia. It's only forestalling the inevitable. I mean I'm going to send an official call for that cruiser myself!"

The woman looked at him in amazement as he swung about and clapped the phones once more to his ears.

"If we can only get her!" he half groaned as he stood with bent head and fixed eyes, listening, while the seconds dragged slowly by. "If we can only get her!" he repeated less hopefully.

He turned to his switch again, and still with the great blue spark coupled and crashed and volleyed from the discharging rods. Then again he waited and listened, the lines on his face deepening in the hard light from the electric above him.

An Enraged Captain

"The night's against us!" he exclaimed almost despairingly as the switch came hurriedly down on the contact-pins and his hand once more went out to his key-lever. His fingers closed on the handle, but the intended call was not sent.

So nervous flash of blue flame bridged the waiting spark-gap. For even before he turned, McKinnon knew that his cabin door had been suddenly opened and that a squat- and thick-set figure stood there peering in at him.

"What's re you workin' that key for?" demanded the figure. It was the thunderous voice of the ship's master, Captain Yandel. McKinnon remembered that he must have overheard the squeaking at the masthead, from the bridge.

"What're you tryin' to send out there?" repeated the officer.

"I'm getting distances from a Standard Oil tank," answered the man at the table after just a moment of hesitation.

"Distances at this time o' night?"

"You heard what I said, didn't you?" cried the defiant McKinnon.

The enraged officer let his glance wander to the woman, who had backed away a little, as near to the door as possible. McKinnon did not move, but he was thinking both hard and fast. He had already seen the look on the other man's face.

"What's this woman doing here?" demanded Captain Yandel.

The long-limbed operator shot up out of his chair angrily at the barb in that thunderous voice. He kept yelling himself to keep cool. It was plainly to be seen that he was still unnatured in accepting insolence without protest. Yet still again the challenge was flung at him.

"What's this woman doing in this station at this time o' night?"

McKinnon turned slowly about.

"Shall I tell him?" he asked. His voice was so quiet and seemingly self-contained that the woman's first blind panic of fear slipped away from her.

"Yes, tell him," she replied.

"She Is My Wife"

The captain strode into the cabin. He stood behind Alicia Boynton, a little to one side; McKinnon, from the operating chair, to the other. Between the toses of his voice as he spoke carried a tacit reproof to his superior, a reproof for the indelicate note that had been thrust upon their quiet and orderly talk.

"This woman is my wife!"

The Unexpectedness of Things

By DR. FRANK CRANE

DID you ever notice how things seem to come? Most of your happiness you did not get; it was handed to you; it just happened in and sat down when you were not looking for it. The thing you have created and planned and yearned to possess you missed. Your actual gains are all by-products of your will.

Naturally all the calamities, defeats and sicknesses of same; nobody ever went after such things.

So your successes and failures, your big griefs and joys seemed to move in on you. Indeed the thing we get (and brag of, lying, as if it were by our own effort) is so different from the thing we started for that the sky—essays it this phase of nature that first led men to suspect of immortal gods? Huxley guessed dreams to be the origin of the idea of ghosts and gods. I've as good a right to guess as he; this is a free country.

And it is not the same phase which keeps alive superstition in little corners of our mind by which we are led to say of palmistry and astrology and table rapping that there may be something in it, and whereby we are either curious to go or afraid to go (it's the same) to see Queenie, the Egyptian seeress, and watch her deal the cards or throw a fit, and tell us that we are going to take a long journey and meet a dark man who will spit in our eye?

A Stubborn Fact.

As a matter of fact, the unexpectedness of events is the large, rocky, stubborn fact. And all depends upon how we adjust ourselves to it. Life is adjustment, life is not what we make it. It is how we take it. There's a difference.

We can jump this way or that, we can camp north or south of the great fact; we can live in its sunny or shady side. But don't imagine for one fatuous moment that we can budge it.

For instance, as to this great disposing will that orders events without reference to us, we call it luck; then we are gamblers, and life is a huge poker game. There have been those who thus have adjusted themselves to destiny, from the earliest philosopher who held that the universe is "a fortuitous concourse of atoms," down to the last young jackass who held a full house against four perfect-ly good deuces.

Again, we can take the point of view that the universe is an immense machine, as Darwin says, "an enormous, immeasurable steam engine, rolling on in its dead indifference to grind me limb from limb." So thinking, we can plant ourselves grimly against it, even as it is grim against us. Then we are stoics. There is a kind of Indian satisfaction in thus presenting a stone face to destiny. I have nothing to say against it. As Abraham Lincoln remarked: "I should think that for those who like that sort of thing, that is about the sort of thing they would like."

As Little Children

Once more, we can call ourselves scientific, patter learnedly about the reign of law and the religion of science, and fondly imagine that because all things must happen according to law (which is quite true) therefore we know what the laws are (which is not true in the least).

And lastly, we can become as little children, which action I make bold to recommend to the reader. We can take things as they come, weep when they hurt and laugh when they please us. We can try our best, and be as glad with the thing that comes as with the thing we tried for. We can be scientific and yet realize that all our science is but a faulting speak in nescience. We can put away superstition as a species of fruitless insanity. We can decline skepticism, because the end thereof is hard death, as true with white. We can reject the machine and the poker game theories of the universe, because they deaden our finer senses.

And we can, as little children, and after the manner of the good women and noble men for the last thousand years or so, look at the universe with wonder, and at the bower behind it with love and trust, and say those wisest words ever directed to the infinite:

"Our Father, which art in heaven, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done."

Up-to-Date Jokes

Candidate—I think I'll send a ton of coal to every widow in the district. How is that for a scheme?

"Pretty fair. But what if your opponent sends coal to them as ain't widows as yet? They control the vote."

* * *

Professor—It's one of the frailties of human nature that no matter how much a man gets he wants more.

Friend—Oh, I don't know about that—not in a police court, he doesn't.

* * *

"After all, things are pretty evenly apportioned in this world."

"Eh—you! A strong-minded woman generally has a weak-minded husband."

"Why not?"

"I always get dizzy when I travel in a circle."

She—I see a fellow married a girl before he died so that she could have his millions when he was gone. Could you love a girl like that?

He—Where does she live?

* * *

"Pass, man! Have you always been blind?"

"No, mum," answered Meandering Mullins unthinkingly. "Last week I was lame, but dare weren't enuff to it."

George—She sings nicely, doesn't she? Tom—Oh, yes; when she sings they have to close the windows.

George—My goodness! What for?

Tom—When her voice is so sweet it draws the flies.

Washboilers Make Good Drums, Says Anty Drudge.

Bobbie—"See my drum!" (Bang! Bang! Bang!)

Mother—Bobbie, stop that instantly. You'll pound a hole in that washboiler and then how can I wash your dirty clothes?"

Anty Drudge—"Just let him pound it all he wants to. That's all a washboiler is good for. Get some Fels-Naptha soap and you can wash his clothes and all the others easier, quicker and better in cold or lukewarm water, without boiling."

Light summer clothes are more easily damaged than winter fabrics. That is good and sufficient reason why they should be washed with Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water.

In washing with Fels-Naptha there is no boiling or cooking to weaken the delicate fibres, no hard-rubbing to fray them, no injurious chemicals to eat holes in them.

But there are other reasons. It is far easier on the woman who does the washing. There is no hard-rubbing, no blistering fire, no scalding suds to steam the face and redden the hands.

Fels-Naptha soap does its work best in cold or lukewarm water, dissolving the dirt so it can be washed away with a simple rinsing. Sounds easy and comfortable, doesn't it? And it is just as easy and comfortable as it sounds if you use Fels-Naptha the Fels-Naptha way.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

FLEET TO BRING NORTH SHORE JOY

PROVINCETOWN, Aug. 5.—Only six vessels of the big Atlantic fleet are now in the harbor here. The other ships have scattered to Rockport and Salem to freshen up along the North shore. Boston also has a share, for the twelve torpedo boat destroyers sailed for that city. Admiral Osterhaus's flagship, the Nebraska, and the battleships Delaware and Michigan are at Rockport, so are seven submarines. The gunboat Castine, tender Severn, the destroyers Paulding, Drayton, McCall, Terry and Perkins and the submarines Stringham, Narwhal, Sunfish, Salmon, Snapper and Tarpon are at Gloucester.

Salem will experience to the full the presence of the naval fleet over the week end. The jackies are not only going to be entertained but they will do some entertaining themselves. The men of the South Carolina are going to play ball with the Salem girls to-night. They have engaged the nursery of a company H for the evening and will be pleased to have the company of all the girls in Salem. Peabody and Danvers, Lynn or anywhere else, a dance for which a $1 entry fee will be charged. The ship will furnish music. Every caterer in the city has been told to hold himself in readiness to begin serving ice cream at a moment's notice anytime after 8 o'clock this evening. The latter word to commence, to continue indefinitely until every girl in the ball cries quits.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS STOCKS CLOSE WITH A RALLY

STATE STREET, Aug. 5.—Closing During the last half-hour's trading the market rallied from the price recorded most of the day, which in some cases was over a point below the opening. This was in spite of the efforts of the rank and file of traders, who were all bearish and tried to construe all news into bad omens. While some of the buying undoubtedly represented short covering, there was also plenty of genuine absorption and accumulation in many issues.

During the early selling by the bear contingent, Lehigh, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Great Northern preferred, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Baltimore & Ohio were the most vulnerable. Steel was freely offered, and there were rumors of the further liquidation of this stock by the pool, which has been operating in it.

It was the general consensus of opinion on the street, that while there had been considerable liquidation, in large scale during the past week in issues which had pressure directed against them; most of the selling was for the account of traders who did not respond promptly to margin calls. The strength in Atchison, Canadian Pacific and Erie, all of which closed at top advance, was favorably commented upon, and it is said that any stock which had readily made a fractional or all fractional point could not be hammered and that therefore the market was not near as weak in undertone as many would have the public believe.

MANY KILLED IN HAYTI FIGHTING

CAPE HAYTIEN, Aug. 5.—Twenty men were killed and twice that number injured in a battle fought in the streets by the followers of General Leconte and Mons. Firmin. The conflict lasted two hours.

Several were injured in a fight last night between German marines and a crowd of natives who attempted to loot a store.

All the warships in the harbor are landing marines. One boat load was fired on. German and English marines are patrolling the streets. All the cafes have been closed.

General Simon and his family have departed for Kingston on the Dutch steamship Prins Der Nederlanden.

The U. S. S. Dubuque and Salem arrived here last night.

General Leconte has declared himself military dictator of the island, and it is rumored that he intends to break up Congress when he reaches Port Au Prince. The Congress is believed to be in the majority, however.

PLANT ESTATE RIOTERS HERE

Grim and sullen, the sixty laborers employed on the new Thomas G. Plant Summer estate at Marion, N. H., who for hours terrorized the little White Mountain town, shooting at and threatening the inhabitants, were escorted by seventy stern farmers armed with repeating rifles to the steamer Belle of the Isle today, and sent to Boston. They sailed to Weirs where they boarded a train and arrived in Boston at 11:45 a. m.

They did not leave however, until their expenses to Boston, the cause of the riot, had been paid.

The laborers, who were part of a band of 200 employed on the new estate which Thomas G. Plant of Boston had just purchased and was finishing up to be the summer estate in New Hampshire, for hours held possession of the town and turned the quiet, peaceful country town into a wild, lawless Western mining camp. "shooting up" in approved Western style.

The residents, frightened by the rioters, the flashing of knives and shooting of revolvers, fled in panic to the woods. Sheriff Burke was notified, and after rounding up a posse of farmers armed to the teeth, was finally able to restore order.

The trouble started when the laborers, having completed their work, received their pay for the week and were dismissed. They attended their expenses on Boston, but the foreman, lacking authority, were first in their refusal. This caused the excitable foreigners to break all restraint.

BOSTON PARTY IN SWITZERLAND

INTERLAKEN, Switzerland, Aug. 5.—The Boston Chamber of Commerce party which is touring Europe, arrived here today from Lucerne. The members are thoroughly tired out from the hot weather which they have encountered during the past week. They will rest up during the next few days and on Monday will leave for Paris. For the few days that they will be here they will be able to enjoy the beauties of nature, which the country affords, and on Sunday will spend a day in the mountains where it is Summer at the bottom and Winter at the summit.

Many of the members are keenly disappointed by the fact that the visit to Italy has been omitted from the schedule.

Fred J. Melange, special correspondent of the BOSTON AMERICAN, is writing vivid articles about what the Chamber of Commerce party is seeing abroad. Read his article in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Glance at the prize list.

If you are not already a contestant we confidently believe that this will make you one.

If you are a contestant, these visible rewards of victory will be a spur to your enthusiasm.

New contestants should not fail to equip themselves with the official American Proverb Book which is provided as an aid to contestants in solving puzzle pictures.

This Proverb Book contains the correct answers, somewhere between six centuries and the puzzle picture which will be used during the contest.

It is the sole and only authority upon which contestants should rely.

Price of the book is 25 cents. Contestants may call for same at the Contest Department, 275 Devonshire Street, or may send by mail. If sent for by mail send only money order.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

A. D. L.—You may make your own answer slips for the extra sets, so that each one may answer on only one slip.

M.—Different members of the family are allowed to enter.

W. G. L.—There are a few unauthorized advertised solutions of our proverb puzzles for sale. We have seen some of the lists of these proverbs. There is a large percentage errors in all of them.

Contestants are warned that these upstarts are really selling their own guesses to people who are probably better guesses than they are.

The official American Proverb Book is the sole and only authority upon which contestants can rely.

B. L. T.—Follow the printed forms. Only one answer on a page.

Anxious—You can make your own answer blanks if you wish. The use of the American coupon while desirable, is not necessary.

A. B. L.—It is not necessary to send either the pictures or the printed answer blanks.

M. S. O.—Exact accuracy and neatness may be a very important factor.

T. T.—One paster is enough.

M. D.—The correct answer to each puzzle picture in the contest will be found somewhere within the covers of the official Proverb Book. Therefore, you will find that the American's Proverb Book is your sole guide and authority.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, regardless of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand or printed with the pen or typewriter, but the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participation in any other contest now being run or which may be run in the future by the American will in no way affect entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture, and each will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the contest.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, or any answers given in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. Contestants will be allowed to give contestants forty days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers that are not registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be seen in all the copies printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make such changes now or additional ones, as conditions may seem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

Welcome to Togo—the Japanese Fighter and Statesman

He Put a Ring in the Nose of the Russian Bear and Gave That Shaggy Beast a Lesson Needed

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Togo is in America. He is the big sea fighter—so far as we know, by experience the biggest sea fighter living.

He was the backbone of the Japanese war. He is the gentleman that sent Russian ships to the bottom of the ocean as quietly and as calmly as a competent scullery maid would send the dumbwaiter to the lower regions.

Russia needed the thrashing that she got—that is to say, the Russian Czar and the Russian government needed a beating.

The Russian people were not concerned in that fight. It was not their fight—their hearts were not in it.

The Japanese whipped the Russians, because the Japanese government had the Japanese people behind it and because the Russian government had the Russian people against it.

The Japanese beat the Russians, also, because friends and relations of Russian Jews that had been murdered so atrociously LENT JAPAN THE MONEY THAT WAS NEEDED, AND WOULD NOT LEND TO RUSSIA.

In spite of Japan's poverty Japanese bonds sold freely. There was plenty of money coming to give the Czar the lesson—and he got it.

Now comes Togo, the old sea fighter, to pay an official visit to this country.

Welcome to him, the man that thrashed the biggest bully and the most cowardly oppressor in Europe. May he enjoy his visit and be made welcome everywhere.

Togo at Tshushima, May 28, 1905

By WEX JONES

THE untried ships of the little brown man,
Ceaselessly guarding the Sea of Japan.
Up and down, as they pitch and roll,
Never a moment they halt their patrol,
Till over the edge of the world appears
The fleet of a nation white with years,
White with years and swollen with pride,
As its ships of war roll down the Tide.
Then in close the watchdogs that guard the strait,
And the fleet from afar has met its fate!

Oh, the crash of cannon, the shriek of shell!
The men that die in that watery hell!
The rending steel, the torpedo jar,
As down go the ships of the Great White Czar;
And over that sea when the fight is done
Waves no flag but that of the Red-Rayed Sun.
Disgrace for the Russian, commander and man,
Glory to spare for the men of Japan;
But sorrow alike for the mothers at home,
Whose sons drift dead in that blood-red foam.

A Crushing Blow to the Black Barbarism of War

Without prodigies or portents—like the coming of the Kingdom of the Son of Man—a great benefit has fallen upon the human race. Three of the world's strong nations, like three tall knights of the Holy Grail, have joined their hands at Washington in pledges to aid and countenance one another in fighting down the dragons of war.

It will always be remembered of this day—when it has drifted far into the past and become a red-letter d anniversary for universal celebration—that America was the master-spirit that led the way into the new era of peace.

It will certainly be remembered that William Howard Taft, President of the United States, made a notable speech in the Christmas season of 1910, pleading that the honor of nations might be made more honorable by submission to righteous judgment—a speech that struck through the sophistries of chancellors and diplomats, and eventuated in the double pact.

And perhaps it may also be remembered that the AMERICAN the preceding year published the editorial plea for arbitration which awoke so many echoes from peace platforms and political cabinets, and prepared the way for the President's great adventure.

For the prosecution of the work that has just been finished at Washington (finished—for its confirmation by the Senate is, of course, to be presumed) the AMERICAN has struck not once or twice, but many times. Yet there can be no doubt it is to Mr. Taft that credit is principally due.

As was said publicly by Mr. Hearst on the 27th of last April: "War is passing, and no single individual or instrumentality has done so much to compel the passing of war as the man who was once Secretary of War—the calm and quiet, but able and effective, President of the United States.

"Every dog has his day, and the dogs of war have had theirs.

"The conduct of war belongs to the black barbarism of the past.

"War might have use for the arts and sciences of civilization, but a higher civilization can never consent to lend its agencies for the perpetuation of the cruelties and barbarities of war.

"I believe that a very few years will see the armies and navies of the whole world reduced to form merely disciplined forces of international police; and the duties of these forces will be not to make war, but to keep the peace."

The subject of the editorial in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN is: "Was Rockefeller's Name Cosimo de Medici 500 Years Ago?" It's great!

Saved From the Mire of a Great Scandal

In the Most Remarkable Interview He Ever Gave, Governor Foss Tells the Sunday AMERICAN How He Rescued Massachusettes from the Bow-Wows

The greatest political section that a Boston newspaper has ever published will rank as a tame feature when compared with the department of politics that has been prepared for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

It will be remarkable for its comprehensive review of the whole field of political activity in Massachusetts. It will be particularly striking because of the positive statements made by men who are candidates for the nomination for Governor.

Governor Foss has given many interviews. He has been "written up" by some of the most noted writers in the country. But he has given to the Sunday AMERICAN the most extraordinary and the most sensational interview of his life.

This time he has stirred things up in a way that is bound to arouse an unusual interest in State affairs. He has hit out straight from the shoulder. He has rapped a number of distinguished heads. He has turned the spotlight on what he terms the "BAD BUSINESS MANAGEMENT OF THE AFFAIRS OF THE COMMONWEALTH."

For instance, he says: "IF I HAD NOT BEEN ELECTED, OR IF SOMEBODY WHO WOULD DO WHAT I AM DOING HAD NOT BEEN ELECTED, MASSACHUSETTS WOULD SOON BE IN THE MIRE OF A GREAT SCANDAL. THE STATE WAS FAST GOING TO THE BOW-WOWS."

Then he tells just what the lines of danger were along which the State was traveling and how he has led it back to the right road, upon which, he says, it is going to be kept in the future.

The Governor boldly declares there isn't the slightest doubt in his mind that, not only has a lot of the State's money been wasted, but much has been actually stolen from under the very noses of the men who were appointed or elected to look out for the State's interests.

This is an interview with Governor Foss, the State's business manager, and not Eugene N. Foss, the politician. It is the talk of a man who has been keeping house on Beacon Hill for seven months and has found many things in the open places that needed cleaning up, and has reason to believe there are many things in the corners that must be swept out.

He talks of the overdose of theory from which the State has suffered. He tells of the "FUDDY-DUDDY" that has prevented successful management of the State departments and institutions. He criticises important commissions. But he does not stop at that. He goes right to the roots of the evils and promises that, next year, he will put the axe to them.

There never has been an interview just exactly like this one which Governor Foss has given to the Sunday AMERICAN. Other Sunday newspapers may contain talks with the Governor, but not one of them will compare for a second in interest to the one in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It is exclusive. In many respects it is startling.

Secrets of European War Scare Told by C. W. Barron

The war crisis in Europe, a great many people think, has not passed, in spite of the rumors from Berlin that a basis has been found for a settlement of the trouble between Germany and France. The German warships, it is pointed out, are still at or near Agadir and the Kaiser has manifested no intention of recalling them.

C. W. Barron, manager of the Boston News Bureau and one of the greatest financial experts in this country, has just returned to Boston after a prolonged visit to England, France and Germany. He had many opportunities to get inside war information while he was abroad.

In a very frank and comprehensive interview, which will be printed in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN, Mr. Barron tells his views of the Moroccan imbroglio.

Mr. Barron proposes a plan by which Germany could get out of the predicament she is now in with credit to herself, and unless Germany does get out in this manner or backs down squarely, Mr. Barron declares, there is great danger of war.

So tense is the situation abroad, Mr. Barron says, that there may be an explosion at any time—especially if an English and German warship should meet and some friction result.

Mr. Barron tells how he thinks the war would be fought, if one began, and where the greatest battles that the world ever saw would take place.

The interview is vigorous and graphic. It tells things that could not be spoken openly in London, or France or Berlin. This is one of many excellent features of to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN and in order to be sure of getting the paper it is advisable to order it to-day.
